WASHINGTON-LEE HIGH SCHOOL

Arlington, Virginia

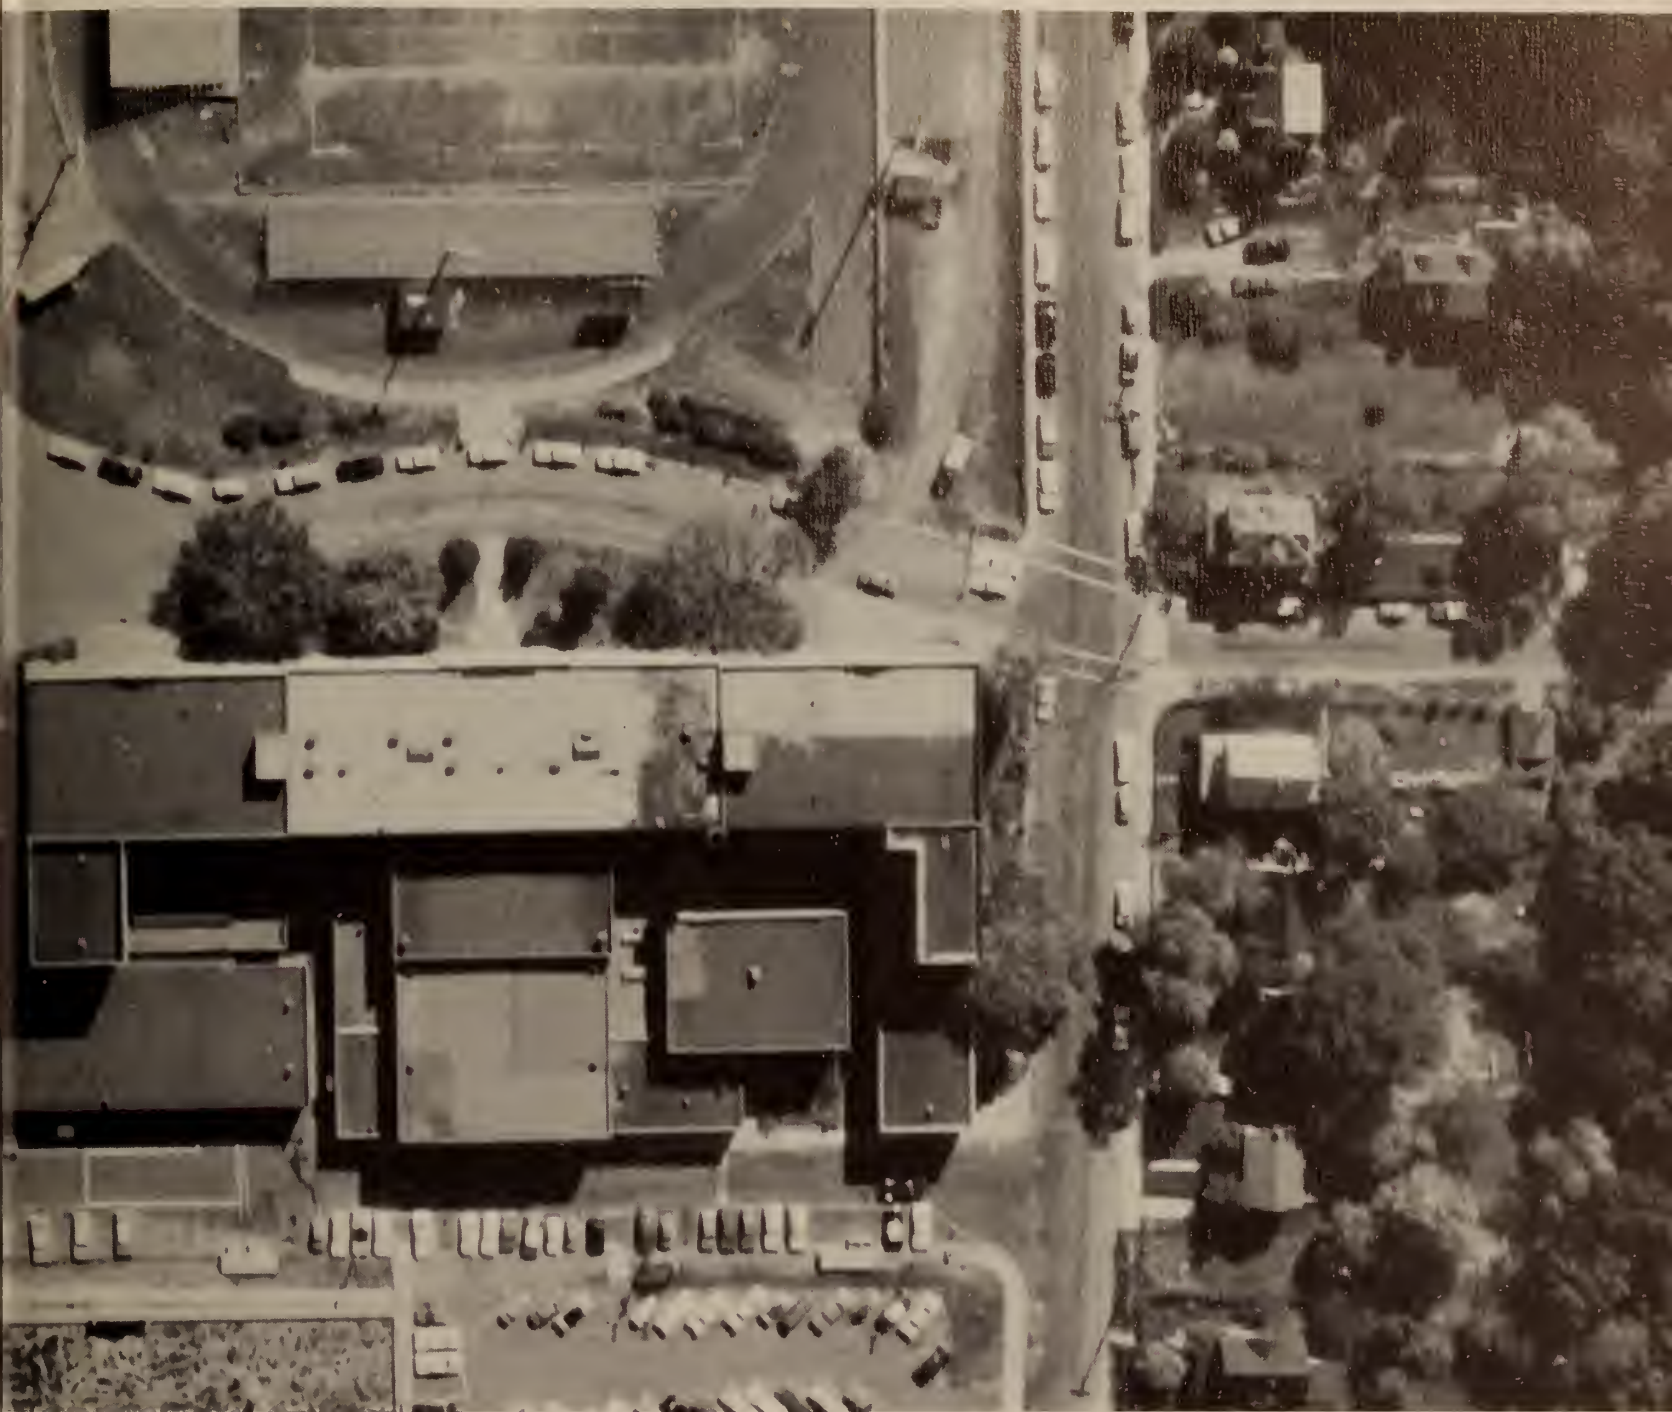

Published by the Yearbook Staff

Volume XXXVII

A new day begins. Dawn brings the freshness of hope and the renewal of life. The old attitudes and neglected opportunities of yesterday have gone, and with the first light of morning comes an entirely different world. A student's experience at Washington-Lee is a unique part of his life, distinct from any other. Labor in study, fulfillment of goals, and fellowship with friends all fill this day and make it worthwhile. When it ends, something of value has been created, even if it is merely a beginning for another day. Just as part of every day's work involves some preparation for the next, the individual's achievement at Washington-Lee must serve as a beginning for some other day coming in a still larger, more demanding world.

Football, Social Events Highlight Fall Activities

Beginning the fall term with high hopes for the coming school year, W-L students participated in scholastic and social activities. Self-improvement in the field of leadership comprised the goal of the Leadership Training Conference, while the Guidance Office stressed planning for the future during the College Night Program attended by both Washington-Lee and Wakefield students and parents.

Distracted from scholastic endeavors by the cascade of fall colors and brisk air, students filled the stadium to see the Generals win the Northern Virginia Championship and keep the Old Oaken Bucket on Thanksgiving Day. Celebrating the victory, W-Lites danced and socialized at the annual Turkey Hop sponsored by the Crossed Sabres.

"I did it!" exclaims senior Peggy Coffman, as Martha Reichard and Jean Wattles read of her early acceptance at Mt. Holyoke.

"What this country needs is outstanding leaders," says Jo Gregg as she speaks to attentive students participating in a spirited discussion group during the annual Washington-Lee Leadership Training Conference held in November.

"We'll do the annual some other day," snicker editors Dave Schotler and Martha Reichard pausing to carve a pumpkin.

Accompanying himself by guitar and tapping foot, folk singer Jim Zell entertains at Alpha-Omega Service Club Hootenanny.

Sometimes it takes a little ingenuity, proves Bill Clarke, intent on buying a box of popular Penman popcorn.

"This is the way to do two bits," explains Stan Winston as the cheerleaders practice for the annual powderpuff game.

"I'm a Roman. What does it look like?" snarls senior Mike Love at the Halloween Hop sponsored by Theta this fall.

Colorful Fall Leaves,

Taking advantage of College Night to learn about prospective schools, Sue Donaldson and Jessica Guy chat with the representative from Stratford College inquiring about entrance requirements, tuition and scholastic facilities.

Brisk Air Add Pep to Activities, Athletics

Focusing the camera, WMAL-TV technicians televise the Old Oaken Bucket contest for the first time in W-L history.

Victorious Team, Festive Dance Highlight

"I think they're pretty too," declares football co-captain Dave Roylance to Turkey Hop Queen Patty Plaine just after her coronation.

"You fix mine and I'll fix yours," laughs cheerleader Pat Binns, as she and Sally West pin on each others' corsages at the Turkey Game.

Blazing flames illuminate the cold night sky, as a George Washington "President" burns in effigy at the Beta Bonfire.

Thanksgiving Day

"This music sounds great!" enthuses Karl Netting to his date, Mary Clark, as they dance at the Turkey Hop.

"THE CRUCIBLE"

Screams, Curses, Shock Audience at Production

Screams, curses and accusations reverberated throughout the auditorium as the Thespians presented The Crucible by Arthur Miller. The story of the infamous Salem witch trials of colonial Massachusetts, the play criticized the communist baiting of the McCarthy era of the 1950's.

Rejected by the farmer John Proctor, played by Evans Hays, Norma Levin in the role of Abigail Williams took her revenge by accusing him of the then hated and feared crime of consorting with the devil. The moral lesson of the production came at the end when Proctor had the courage to sacrifice his life rather than make a false confession.

Screaming in terror, Salem children Betty Jo Underdahl, Debby Altman and Norma Levin cringe from torments of evil spirits.

In the tense trial scene of "The Crucible", the Deputy Governor (Charles Brewer) watches helplessly while John Proctor (Evans Hays) comforts Mary Warren (Lynn Brown), who testifies that the girls pretended to see spirits.

"This tastes terrible," mutters Frances Rice as she tears masking tape for The Crucible's scenery.

Listening obediently, senior Norma Levin receives instruction from Mr. Townsend on where Abigail should cross the stage.

Amateur Forecasters Hope for Snow Days

Studying all wind movements, barometric readings and temperature changes occupied the winter months of Washington-Lee students who attempted to predict snow days. The weather man rewarded the budding forecasters with enough of the white precipitation to close the school for a half day in December and two days in mid-January.

The spirit of Christmas pervaded the school during the weeks of December. The homerooms spent their time decorating and filling baskets of food for needy families and designing imaginative doors. The highlight of the winter season came with the annual junior-sponsored Christmas assembly. For the first time a member of the Peace Corps spoke at the program as the choir and orchestra played traditional holiday music.

One of the latest steps, the sardine twist, gets a real workout on the crowded floor of the Christmas dance sponsored by the members of the Washington-Lee crew in order to raise enough money to prepare for another trip to England.

"What a life!" mutters Blue and Gray photographer Mr. Deal as he adjusts his camera for a club picture.

"Take that . . . and that!" snarls senior Al Ash, throwing snowballs at a hastily retreating junior, Gail Helm.

"So this is how you hike the ball", thinks senior Karla Brownmiller as she and her fellow Sigma members work out before powder puff game with Kappa Service Club while "Coach" Pete Lafakis watches outcome of maneuver.

"Ho-o-ld that note" directs the conductor of the Washington-Lee Symphony Orchestra, Miss Dorothy Baumle, to student musicians as they perform at Yule Season Assembly.

Christmas Decorations Transform Building

"They made them tall in those days," comments senior Clayton Day as he examines a Christmas shepherd made by senior Ellie Klein.

"Red, then blue, then green . . ." muses junior artist Karen Wallen as she considers the best color scheme while painting a stained glass window.

"Makes you hungry, doesn't it?" drools senior John Lewis to Tim Henderson as he surveys the accumulation of baskets gathered during the annual Student Council sponsored charity drive for distribution to needy families in Arlington.

Standing guard in the Senior Court, a quickly constructed snowman shows evidence of lunchtime activity.

"Hold still!" warns senior secretary Susan Nelson as she measures Stan Austin for his graduation cap.

"Make him put me down!" yells Jim Brimson to referee Jim Weeks, as Walter "Kill" Dove exhibits his wrestling skill.

Folk Fests, Sports,

Returning to the scene of their crime, 1963 graduates Rick Fox and Ljuba Klein discuss old times with senior Mike

Love at the Christmas tea which the Advanced Placement English IV students prepared for the veterans of the course.

Dances Enliven Dreary Months of Winter

Chipping in for the Cancer Drive, Jim Brodsky, Ed Kingman, Neil Shawen and Mr. Gordon Bourne contribute spare coins.

Examining the letter that caused Cathy Kiley to faint, Charles Allegrone, John Heller and Jon Friedman, stars of the spring play, My Three Angels, make themselves at home in their roles as convicts in a French Guiana penal colony.

SPRING

Spring Breezes Beckon Track, Baseball Teams

Warm rains and a shining sun transformed the soft, white blanket on the Quincy Street diamond into a brown swamp for the baseball team to practice in, while clear skies and cool breezes furnished the girls' as well as the boys' crew with favorable training weather.

Seniors, who won a first place as the busiest in the school, occupied their time by sending out graduation announcements, ordering caps and gowns, studying for final examinations and preparing for the long awaited senior prom, while juniors took a close second, by taking college boards and ordering and receiving class rings.

"What beautiful legs you have!" exclaims Tim Henderson as he views John Rogers' garb for the first time during Bermuda Day.

"Which one should I choose?" asks senior John Williams as he prepares to sample cookies made by the Spanish Honor Society.

"We could start a paper drive," exclaims sophomore Sally Peck to Judy Flynn as they clean lockers.

Annual Bermuda Day Ends Novelty Week

Spring weather draws students outside, and Nancy Zurich and David Johnson make no exception to this rule as they spend a quiet study period outside leisurely pondering the intricacies of a giant slide rule borrowed from the school.

Braving snow and bitter weather, family and friends of Washington-Lee's exchangees to Hershey, Pennsylvania, turn out to wish them bon voyage as they board Greyhound bus chartered in order to transport them to 'Chocolatetown'.

"Of course we're not too wild," Bob Counts assures Allie Ash as they try on their Novelty Week outfits.

"So that's senior slump!" remarks junior Linda Downin observing Ellis Cohn stricken with the fatal spring disease.

Days of Concentration

Experiments observed, assignments read, equations solved—all fill these days and demand hours of concentration.

ART

Art Department's Talent Decorates Whole School

Members of the Art Department, headed by Mr. Leroy Anderson, lent their talents to the rest of the school this year. With the assistance of the artists an increasing number of bulletin boards in the building took on a more professional air. The department also gave a helping hand to the cafeteria by agreeing to cover the bare walls of the entrance hall with colorful murals.

In addition to the Annual Art Show individual students received recognition in a number of one man exhibits. The newly decorated teachers' lunch room provided an ideal space for their displays. After completing this initial showing, the artists whisked their pictures to rooms in the nearby administration building for a second viewing.

Portraying a Greek god, senior Diana Stamer displays her mask during study of drama in the English Seminar.

"What did you say it is?" queries Clem Palazzolo, as he studies Diane Stief's latest creation for her Art II class.

"Anybody can paint," affirm upperclassmen Ellis Cohn and Bill Parker as they search for stones of the right color and shape for their pattern, "but we know that it takes real talent to plan and construct a mosaic like this one!"

Taking advantage of the natural light, artist Jean Ulmer sets up her painting in the art room window to add a few finishing touches.

BUSINESS

Additions to Department Spark Standard Courses

Changes in the business department this year included two key punches, a sorter, and a course of instruction in their operation for those taking Clerical Processes and Vocational Office Training. Along with these innovations, the acquisition of sixteen more electric typewriters enabled a whole class of first, as well as second year students to learn and practice in the modern way.

Another addition appeared with the revision of the Gregg Shorthand system. Reorganized textbooks, adopted by W-L, required much more actual writing, but instructors believe that the less complicated symbols will increase speed.

Racing to beat the clock, seniors Linda Burchill and Kay Goodsell try to improve their speed and accuracy in shorthand.

"askfg; lkjh," repeats senior Steve Cochrane to himself in preparation for the next lesson, "a lad had a glad dad, half a shad salad."

Explaining the intricacies of an IBM duplicating machine, Miss Gloria Bardsley supplements written instructions for clerical practice class.

"Now what do I do?" wonders Barbara Rollins, learning how to use punch cards in preparation for future jobs requiring knowledge of computer processes, as she discovers that an IBM machine is more complicated than a typewriter.

During a class spent in the language lab, senior Stan Winston firmly adjusts his earphones, glances hurriedly at the difficult French II lesson assigned by the teacher, and settles down for a gruelling session of grammar exercises.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Language Facilities Expand With Third Lab

Mingled vowels and consonants of each of five different foreign languages emerged from the third lab room installed last summer. This addition to the Washington-Lee facilities demonstrated the increased emphasis put on the communication of language through speech. Unlike the other two labs, this one came equipped with a portable console.

This year over fifty-one percent of the student body participated in the program offered by the department. The largest increase of enrollment in all of the languages occurred in German. The pupils studied not only the linguistic aspects but also the history and customs of their respective country which provided students with a working knowledge of the foreign tongues.

Translating a passage from the Aeneid, seniors Dale Vincent and Mike Nash review for a future test on the famous poet.

Nobody's afraid of a piñata, discover Spanish students Jean Armstead and Lynn Riggles as fellow scholars scramble to gather scattered candy from the wounded Mexican ornament, adding to refreshments at the Latin Christmas party.

Demonstrating a "setout," Mr. Sal DeGiorgi uses Ronnie Thomas and Larry Aldrich as guinea pigs.

Jumping for the basketball, Jo Anne Chauncey and Cathy Simpson try to aim it toward their teammates.

HEALTH AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Zealous Archers Master Sport, Hold Tournaments

Having finished the annual archery unit, junior girls held tournaments, complete with balloon covered targets, in gym classes. Miss Joann Williams presented the award of an apple with an arrow through it to the highest scorer, signifying the fabled marksmanship of the celebrated freedom fighter of Switzerland, William Tell.

Leaving the gymnasium behind for a period of eighteen weeks, sophomores migrated to the various health classes as the month of November drew to a close. Emphasizing Civil Defense this year, tenth graders heard guest speakers, viewed innumerable films, and did research work in the library.

Lining up for the next round, archery students in Miss Joann Williams' class wait for stragglers to collect the last arrows.

Viewing the gym from a different angle, junior Rick Benson balances on the horizontal bar during his class in physical education.

With a touchdown in the offing, Butch Maxwell strains to gain the advantage over his opponents, Larry Aldrich and Phillip Lentz, during football game in Mrs. Roger Coggins' class.

"How does this pattern go?" queries Patty Hagen as she struggles to interpret the directions given.

"We'll use this as a background," comments Mrs. Grethe Hansen to Mrs. Mary Cooper before displaying her candy-covered house.

"Just a few more stitches," thinks senior Connie Houston as she hurries to finish the hem of her skirt before class ends.

Students Participate in Nursery Laboratory

Preparing for the future, home economics students participated in a nursery laboratory composed of children four to six years old. For one period each day, students studied child care and development. They learned the techniques of keeping a youngster interested in his work and guiding him in his play. Most important of all, pupils experienced responsibilities which come with parenthood. Several child-enthusiasts visited grocery and toy departments to observe and analyze a toddler's reactions in a strange environment.

Assuming what seemed an impossible job, food students agreed to prepare a formal dinner for the annual Northern Virginia Principals' meeting held at Washington-Lee. Acting as hostesses, the girls fixed and served the entire meal.

Proving that they can cook up more than food, Connie Houston and Priscilla Hoare concentrate on brewing a Christmas delicacy with elaborate bows and neatly-wrapped gifts at holiday session in the Home Economics Department.

"I prefer seven bedrooms," says Greg Roach to Philip Young and Mark Lipsey as they discuss ideas for tomorrow's perfect home.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Apprentices Learn, Serve, Supply Varied Demands

Surprisingly few people know what really goes on in that rectangular red brick structure perched on a hill behind the main building. Actually, it houses the Industrial Arts department. Pupils who make the daily journey out to its classes form the largest service organization found in school. In the course of varied studies, students performed such duties as printing tickets, making blueprints and building boats, podiums and lasers.

Team-teaching programs helped in the attempt of the division to coordinate the practical learning of this area with academic courses. Projects in electronics, graphic arts, mechanical drawing, auto mechanics and woodworking illustrated principles taught by mathematics and science.

"Easy does it," cautions John Boyce as Howard Graham and Karl Meredith help him replace an engine they have overhauled.

Puzzling over a few loose wires, Jeff Clark wonders how he can ever get them back into position in the receiver.

LANGUAGE ARTS

Scholars Forsake Books, Compete in English Bowl

"To win or not to win, there is no question!" screamed enthusiastic cheerleaders from Advanced Placement senior English classes between plays at the English Bowl. In Washington-Lee's answer to the famous college games, the fifth and second periods battled on the boys' athletic field. With the assistance of the female class members as substitutes and cheerleaders, the afternoon scholars mustered enough muscle and vocal power to emerge as champions of the scrimmage.

As Arlington snows melted, inspectors representing the National Council of Teachers of English arrived in classrooms to observe the students and their teachers at work. The examiners noted examples of the procedures and treatment of materials typical of the department.

"If only I could think of a synonym," muses senior Barbara Paine as she uses a free class period to work on her term paper.

Pondering various viewpoints, Ellis Cohn and William Parker listen to Mrs. Berdyne Eddy explain the hedonistic theories of the Rubaiyat as Jackie Sorrell and Sue Hollingsworth take notes at the Art, Music and English Seminar.

"... use gestures for emphasis," suggests speech teacher Mrs. Patricia Holcomb, giving senior Dwight Carmichael pointers on how to improve his 'persuasive talk' during a discussion on proper and improper speaking techniques.

"Why do I have to do homework?" wonders Paul Shannon as he rests from researching a subject for his senior English class while gazing enviously at those who have no worries about what Shakespeare meant in the third act of Macbeth.

LIBRARY

Audio-Visual Aid Cards Increase Library Catalog

Acquisition of practically two thousand books sparked the campaign to make the library a better reference source. Even the card catalog received alteration as audio-visual aid cards appeared with the traditional authors and titles. These red and blue additions referred to records and filmstrips either owned by the school or lent to it.

Complying with custom, sophomores toured the library and listened to talks on its organization during their English classes. Besides lecturing in their place of work, the librarians traveled to various classrooms to explain the facilities which could be obtained for reports and term papers.

Looking towards the future, seniors Dean Bråley and Richard Morde investigate the colleges and universities of their choice.

"I should start on my term paper," Mike Ueltzen reminds himself as he signs the library attendance slip.

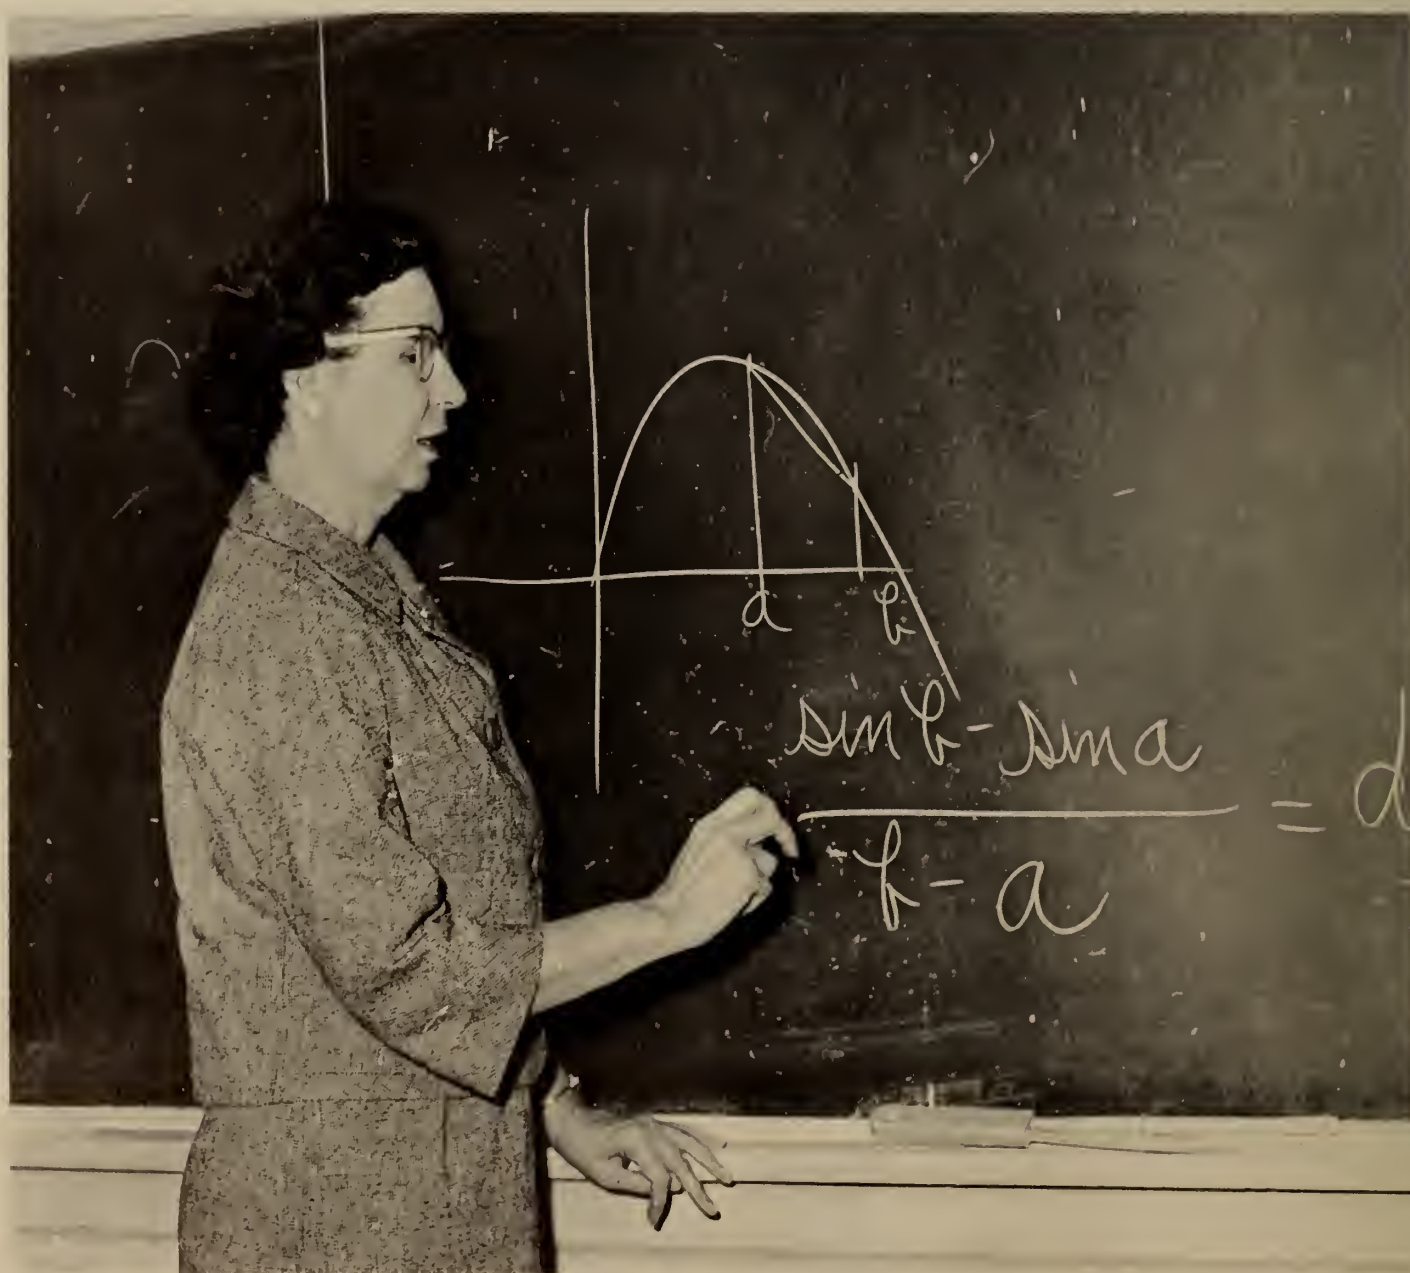

Preparing for her term paper, Patty Solvas checks the card catalogue in the Washington-Lee library for material.

Math Department Acquires Revised Texts

As fast as mathematicians produced improved teaching materials and procedures, Miss Annabelle Caulfield, the head of the Mathematics Department, brought the ideas to Washington-Lee. She included the concept that numbers with the same properties grouped themselves into sets, the study of the relationship between inequalities as well as equalities and discussion of the absolute value of functions. The algebra classes taught by Miss Elizabeth Dalton and Mrs. Louise Allston received modernized texts and some of the geometry classes used books by the School Mathematics Study Group.

Federal grants-in-aid to the languages and to the sciences given under the National Defense and Education Act enabled the department to order more books for its expanding library shelf. These covered topics ranging from brain teasers to slide rules, computers, and advanced calculus.

Finishing with differentiation, Miss Annabelle Caulfield illustrates a final explanation of the slope of plane curves before she introduces her senior advanced placement class to a much more difficult part of the course, integral calculus.

Comparing notes and formulas, seniors Clayton Day and Steve Noll attempt to find the angle of rotation of a polar equation.

Computing the integral equation, John Williams demonstrates the solution to a homework problem.

"I'll just sneak a peek," decides senior Neil Shawen, getting help from Debby Schwartz's calculus homework.

Concerts, Caroling Climax Yuletide Season

"Do, re, fa, mi," sings Mr. Robert Baxter, director of the girls' chorus, as he puts them to a quick test.

Resounding echoes fill the room as members of the band's brass section practice for the annual Spring Concert.

Preparing for the holiday concerts, the music department spent the Fall months memorizing their Christmas music. Combining time and talents, the Orchestra and Choir performed a Yuletide favorite from the "Messiah", Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus." Washington-Lee High School presented the concerts as a Christmas gift to the community. Immediately following the performance, parents and friends met in the Little Theatre for a mixer.

Appearing for the twelfth year, the W-L Choir presented a program at the Washington Cathedral in November. This performance reached citizens living throughout the nation two weeks later by means of a television program, "Lamp Unto My Feet." The film showed the Choir during a part of the annual World Fellowship Service arranged by the YWCA.

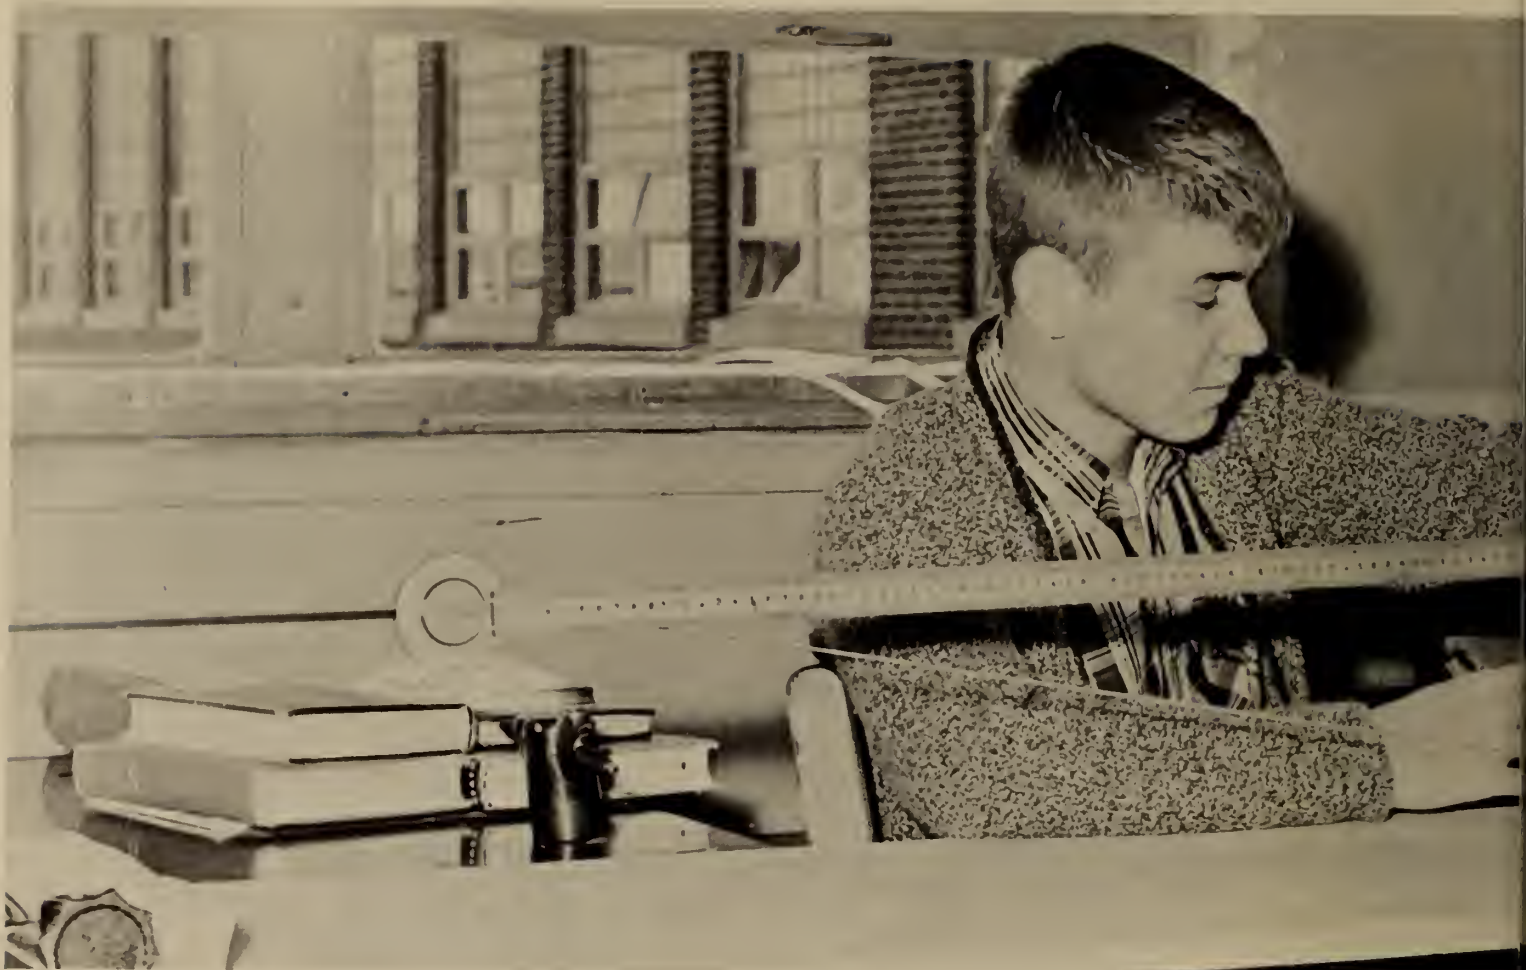

Running over an 'Oxford Choral Song,' Girls' Choir members Virginia Prater, Anne Brennan, Nancy Perdue and Paige Ross review a difficult section of music, preparing for their performance in the traditional Christmas Concert.

SCIENCE

Cell Structure, Chemistry Worry Biology II Students

Second-year Biology, taught by Mr. Merle Swanson, joined the Science Department this year for the first time at W-L. Composed of twenty pupils interested in a more thorough study of Zoology and Botany, the course delved deeply into aspects just touched upon in Biology I, such as biochemistry, cellular physiology, and genetics.

Other additions included three binocular and six compound microscopes, an extra Chemistry class to accommodate the numerous interested students, two Biology teachers, Mr. Lynn Bondurant and Mr. Quenton Franklin, and the phenomenon of two albino guinea pigs born to normal parents in the fall.

"Be sure to cover the bottle quickly," warns Barbara Paine as she and Clayton Day use sulfur oxide and water to form acid.

"What a way to skin a cat!" groans Bob Counts as he performs a detailed dissection during his second year Biology class.

Adding another brick to the stack, junior Greg Anderson studies the effect of weight on acceleration in Mr. Charles Silver's physics class.

"It certainly doesn't look like that," agrees Mr. Donald Lewis as he and Mary Battista compare what Ruth Kaufman has found under her microscope with blackboard sketches of the organisms that they should find on the prepared slide.

"Do you swear to tell the truth?" questions Suzanne Keeney as senior Damon Torregrossa slowly raises his right hand before taking the witness stand during a mock criminal trial demonstrated by the students taking law fundamentals.

Additional Courses Enlarge Department

Aiming at greater insight into world problems, the Social Studies department added two semester courses to its curriculum. The history of the Far East, taught by Mr. Paul Bitner, attempted to give students a fuller understanding of the social, cultural and economic differences which exist between the European and Asian worlds. The history of Russia concentrated on the background of the Eurasian nation which gave rise to the present-day U.S.S.R. At the close of the first semester, students made trips to the embassies of countries they studied.

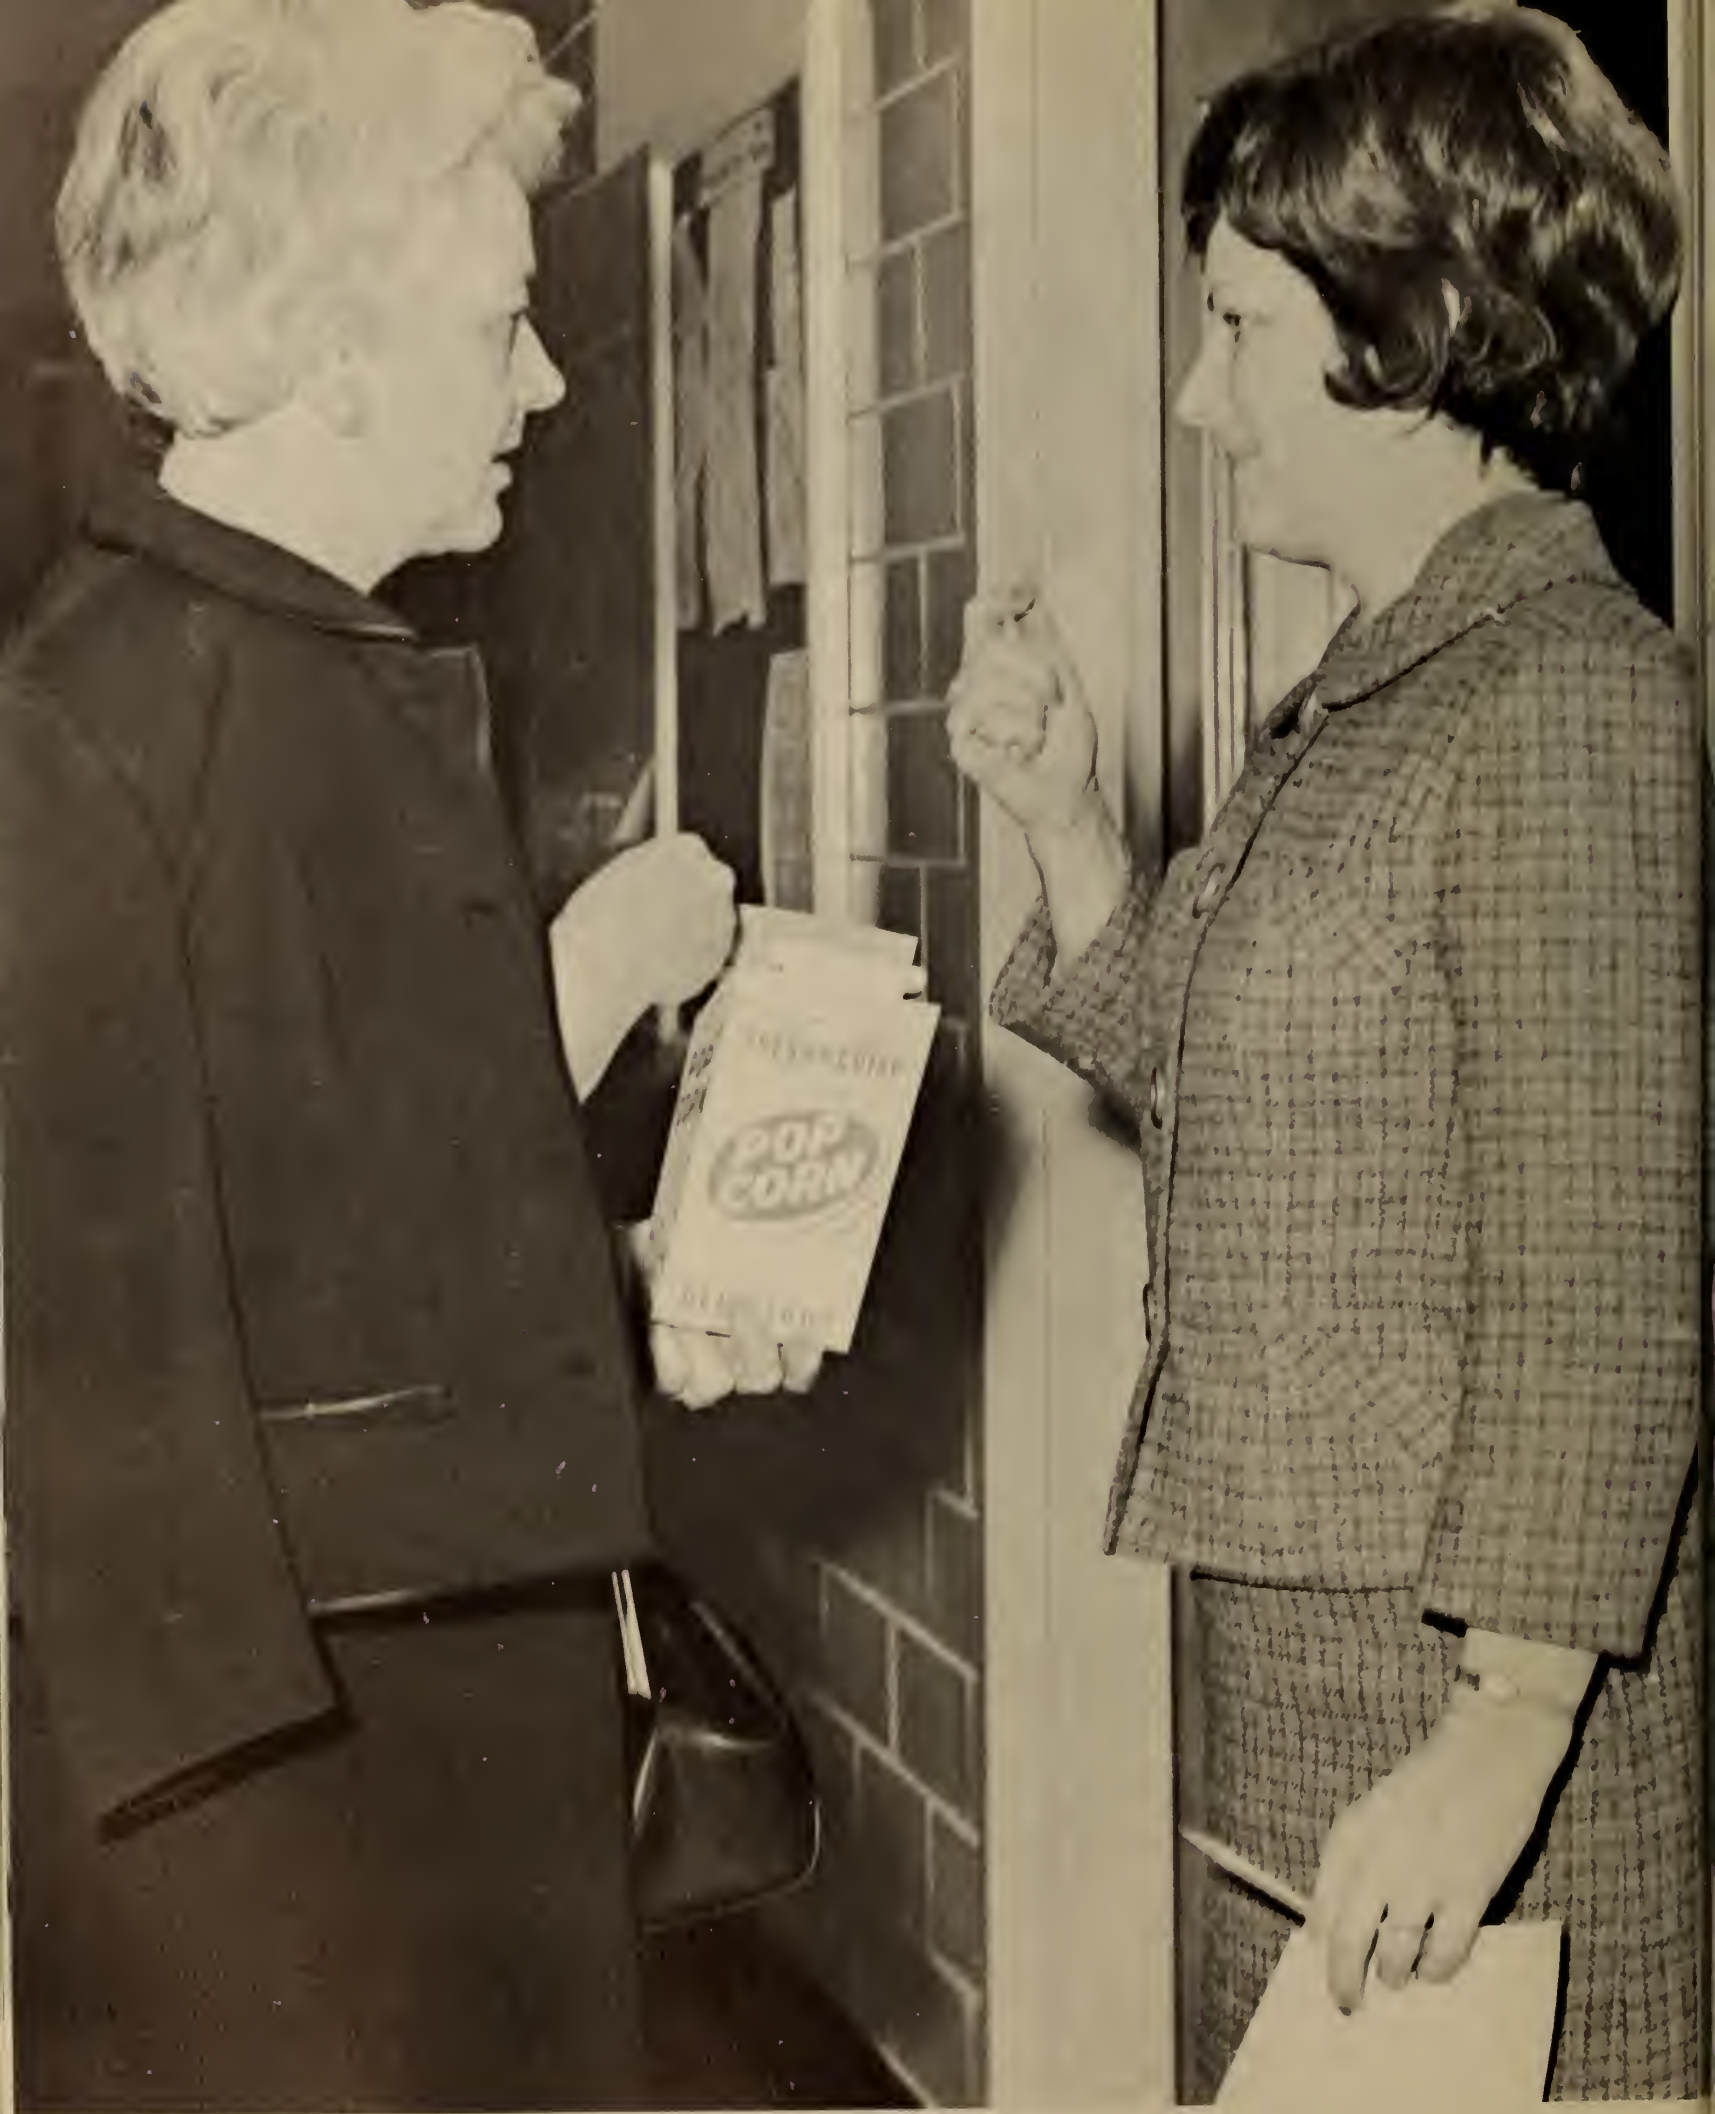

Students from the two intensified government classes tried to inform the school of the various functions of the state by regularly preparing bulletin boards for the main hall on such subjects as the essentials and structure of government.

"Thesis, antithesis, then what?" wonders Barbara Vice during a difficult test in her intensified government class.

Waiting to begin, government teacher Mr. Stanley Book mentally goes over the day's lecture notes before class.

Days of Communication

Discussions planned, lessons presented, criticisms offered—all fill these days and stimulate communication of ideas.

SCHOOL BOARD

Movie Acquaints Citizens With Cafeteria Problem

Realizing and striving to correct the crowded cafeteria situation, the School Board of Arlington County produced the film, "Search For Space." It showed the long lunch lines at Washington-Lee High School and the inadequate number of tables for the students. This film reached the people through an educational television channel in Washington, D. C.

The Board submitted a bond issue to the citizens on November 5, 1963. It stated several acute deficiencies in W-L: the need of kitchen remodeling, the lack of auxiliary gymnasiums for students when weather conditions make it necessary to keep all physical education classes indoors, and an insufficient amount of locker space for gym apparel.

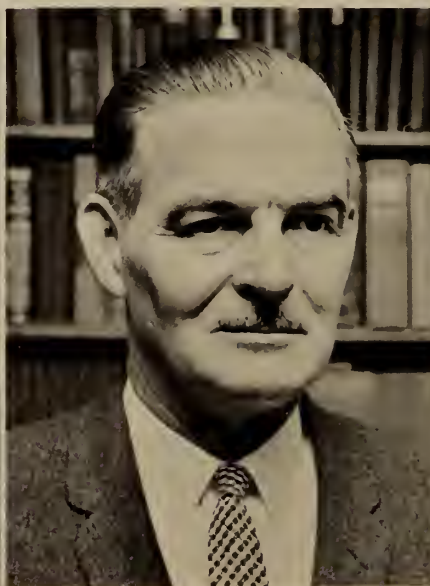

Mrs. Ruth Cox, Chairman; B.S., Syracuse University; Teaching Assistant at George Washington University; third year on the school board.

Dr. Laslo Ecker-Racz, B.S., Ph.D., Harvard University; member of the President's Advisory Commission on Inter-governmental Relations; third year on the school board.

Dr. John Reed Spicer, B.A., M.A.; Alfred University; Columbia University; Doctorate of Education at Columbia University; first year on the school board.

Mr. William Lightsey, The Citadel; Secretary of the Northern Virginia Regional Park Authority; first year on the school board.

Mr. James Stockard, B.B.A., M.A., University of Texas, American University; Deputy Chief Training Branch, International Cooperation Administration; eighth year on the school board.

Superintendents Struggle to Place Students

"Always expect the unexpected" seemed to serve as the motto for the Arlington County Superintendents. The administration found itself faced with the problem of installing a 3.6 percent increase above the projected figure in the high school enrollment. In order to meet the need caused by the sudden "population boom", expansion of certain facilities became necessary. For example, a bond issue provided for the additional classes needed at Wakefield and the enlargements of Washington-Lee's cafeteria, kitchen, and locker room.

With the assistance of Dr. Edward Braun, Dr. Joseph Johnson, Mr. Charles Walsh, and Mr. Howard Bovee, Mr. Ray Reid, Superintendent, took charge of carrying out these additions and changes.

Mr. Ray E. Reid, Superintendent of Schools for Arlington County; B.S., M.A., College of William and Mary; Assistant Virginia State Superintendent of Public Instruction from 1951 to 1958.

Mr. Howard Bovee, Assistant Superintendent for Administration since 1958; B.S., M.A., U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, George Washington University.

Dr. Joseph Johnson, Assistant Superintendent for Instruction since 1958; B.A., M.A., Ed.D., East Texas State College, George Washington University.

Dr. Edward Braun, Assistant Superintendent for Business and Finance since 1948; B.A., M.A., Ph.D., Baldwin-Wallace College, University of Wisconsin.

Mr. Charles Walsh, Assistant Superintendent for Personnel since 1948; B.A., M.A., University of Tennessee, George Washington University.

Mr. O. U. Johansen, Principal; B.S., M.A., Ed.S., University of Minnesota; formerly Principal of Riverview High School and Director of Secondary Education, Sarasota, Florida.

Mr. Alexander Anderson, Assistant Principal in Charge of Instruction; B.A., M.A., Montclair State, Columbia University.
58 Faculty

Mr. Albert Haringer, Athletic Director, Health and Physical Education Department Chairman; B.S., M.S., Arkansas Technical Institute, George Washington University.

Mrs. Doris Matthews, Assistant Principal and Dean of Girls; B.S., M.A., Ohio State University, George Washington University.

Mr. Thomas Haynie, Director of Guidance; B.A., M.A., Randolph-Macon Men's College, George Washington University.

ADMINISTRATION

Administration Endeavors To Improve School Building

Dean of Girls Doris Matthews led the administration's drive for school improvement this year. To illustrate the pressing need, she pointed out one unsightly corner which exhibited no fewer than twelve distinctly different colors of paint.

Mrs. Matthews acquired comfortable chairs for the faculty lunch room and arranged with the Art Department to have gay bulletin boards and murals on the walls and blackboards. In addition to the work there, the Dean obtained venetian blinds for the windows in the hall beside the central office and facilities for storing carbonated beverages in the back of the room used by the Lost and Found.

Mr. William A. Michael, Assistant Principal and Dean of Boys; B.S., M.A., Springfield College, American University.

GUIDANCE

Guidance Remodels to Increase Efficiency

As level assignments replaced the counseling system used in previous years, advisors discovered that a wider range for guidance had opened up to them. This system assigned four sections of each of the three grades to one counselor, instead of assigning several home-rooms of one class as it did last year. This method enabled advisors to foresee the difficulties which might face students as they progress through high school. Counseling service included vocational as well as academic aid.

Mable Allen, B.A., M.A., Westhampton College, George Washington University; Guidance Counselor.

Sarah Cloud, A.B., M.A., Randolph-Macon Women's College, Columbia University; Guidance Counselor.

Beth Drake, B.A., M.A., American University, Columbia University, George Washington University; Guidance Counselor.

Wilmer Kerns, A.B., M.A., Trevecca Nazarene College, University of Michigan; Guidance Counselor.

Mrs. Honora Obourn, B.S., M.A., Columbia University, Indiana University, New York University; Guidance Counselor.

Mrs. Marie Peckham, B.S., M.A., University of Pennsylvania, George Washington University; Guidance Counselor.

Jack Wilson, B.S., Wake Forest College, North Carolina State College, Guidance Placement Counselor.

"What college do you suggest?" asks Mrs. John Williams as she and Mr. Jack Wilson, guidance counselor, discuss her son's possibilities of acceptance to the university of his choice after considering his grade record and test scores.

"We'll just put this stamp on it . . ." murmurs office secretary Mrs. Geanie Rivello as Blue and Gray sponsor Mr.

Herman Menzer waits patiently, hoping that the letter will reach the publishers in time for the approaching deadline.

OFFICE STAFF

Secretaries Aid Faculty, Ease Work Load

Addition of instructional secretaries as aids relieved faculty members of numerous tasks such as typing examinations and mimeographing materials. This system, used for the first time at Washington-Lee, as the assistant principal in charge of instruction Mr. Alexander Anderson, noted, "is part of the development in the solving of the ever-expanding problem of running the school."

As IBM commenced its second year at Washington-Lee, two data processing machines joined the office equipment to help lighten the load of work. One, the key-punch, marked absences and tardies on the attendance cards. The other, a flexo-writer, compiled a list of names from these cards.

Mrs. Marietta Campbell
Library Secretary

Mrs. Lois Downs
Attendance Secretary

Mrs. Myra Hall
Office Secretary

Mrs. Geanie Rivello
Principal's Secretary

Mrs. Doris Robinson
Office Secretary

Mrs. Ruth Smith
Guidance Secretary

Mrs. Grace Thomas
Bookkeeper

Mrs. Ruth Watkins
Registrar

Taking a brief rest, William Michael, Alexander Anderson and O. U. Johansen review the activities filling their day.

Teachers Expand Horizons During Summer

Faculty members left behind their problems, and ventured to different lands during the summer. Mrs. Susan Walensky wandered through the various European countries, while Mr. Hans Klose concentrated on the educational facilities of Germany. For excitement, Miss Gloria Bardsley rode a large raft down the Colorado River. A home building project occupied Mr. John Donahue, and Mr. Herman Menzer participated in three graduate courses offered by George Washington University. Mrs. Ellen Corcoran and her family vacationed at Lake Ontario, Canada. Mrs. Miller Vice camped in Kentucky, whereas Mr. Boyd Webb drove through Texas.

Sixteen instructors joined the ranks of the Washington-Lee faculty this year. They registered in departments requiring additional assistance.

Mrs. Louise Allston, A.B., Winthrop College, University of North Carolina, Duke University, George Washington University, Georgetown University; Plane Geometry, Algebra II; Tikos.

Mrs. Beulah Anderson, B.S., A.M., Radford College, George Washington University; Home Economics III, Foods and Nursery Laboratory; Future Homemakers of America, Homemaking Department Chairman.

Roy Anderson, B.A., M.A., William and Mary, University of Alabama, American University, Temple University; Art I, II, III, IV; Penman Art Club.

Thomas Armstrong, B.S., M.Ed., University of Richmond, University of Virginia; Algebra, Geometry; National Honor Society.

Charles Arthur, B.S., M.B.A., U.S. Naval Academy, George Washington University, University of Maryland; English, Pro-Con Club.

Mrs. Elva Aukland, A.B., M.S., Averett College, Wheaton College, University of Minnesota, Ohio University, George Washington University; Biology; Science Club.

Gloria Bardsley, B.S., University of Utah, Brigham Young University; Typing II, Clerical Practice; Bridge Club.

Dorothy Baumle, B.M., M.M., Northwestern University; Orchestra.

Robert Baxter, B.M., M.A., Oberlin College, New York University; Music Theory, Girls' Choir, Humanities Seminar; Madrigals, Girls' Ensemble.

Paul Bitner, B.A., M.A., University of Buffalo; U.S. and Va. History; History of Russia, History of Far East; Scuba Club.

Wayne Bloomingburg, B.A., M.A., David Lipscomb College, George Peabody College; Va. and U.S. Government; Rifle Club.

Lynn Bondurant, B.A., M.A., Park College, Indiana University; Biology; Phi Service Club.

As Varied Experiences Provide Relaxation

Stanley Book, B.S., M.A., West Virginia University; Va. and U.S. Government, Intensified Government; Social Studies Department Chairman.

Florence Booker, B.A., M.A., Westhampton College, George Peabody College for Teachers; Choir.

Gordon Bourne, B.S., East Tennessee State University; American University; Georgetown University; University of Maryland; Physics (P.S.S.C.); Science Honor Society.

Mrs. Mary Briskin, B.A., M.A., Woman's College, University of North Carolina; Emory University; English IV.

William Brooks, B.A., A.A., M.A., George Washington University; Va. and U.S. Government; Advanced Placement; European History; Spanish III; Spanish Honor Society.

Carl E. Brose, A.B., M.A., DePauw University, University of Maryland; English IV; Debate Club; Sophomore Grade Chairman.

Mrs. Ruth Buck, B.A., Alfred University, Buffalo University, New York University, George Washington University; Reading, English II; Accelerated Reading.

Donovan Byrnes, B.A., A.M., M.A., St. Ambrose College, City College of New York, Columbia University; Art I, Design I.

CAFETERIA STAFF

Students Star in Movie Showing W-L Cafeteria

"Places everyone, cameras," the action began. Long lines, crowded tables, and 800 hungry pupils in the cafeteria made up the scene for the school board movie produced to gain support for the bond issue. The outcome of the film, made last fall, resulted in an addition to the kitchen, a larger eating area, and more serving lines. Construction for the extension began in early spring.

Changes that eased the crowded cafeteria situation included a third lunch, and silverware at the end instead of at the beginning of lines. The student council and junior class adopted the cafeteria as a project for the year. As part of their campaign the eleventh graders posted signs urging students not to cut in line and to return trays.

"We're behind schedule," frets Mrs. Mary Newman, as the hands of the clock predict that students must return to class.

CUSTODIANS

Scores of Motors Require Custodial Care

Heating, lighting, cooking—all of these necessary school duties depend upon the proper operation of Washington-Lee's one hundred twenty-five electric motors. The job of keeping them whirring and buzzing properly constituted one of the tasks delegated to the custodial staff. Other chores included waxing floors during the Christmas vacation, opening rooms used for night school four times a week, distributing teaching supplies in the summer, and caring for the athletic fields. The janitors accomplished all of these labors in addition to the obvious chores of cleaning rooms, repairing broken lockers, arranging the gym for assemblies, and maintaining the heating plant by using two shifts, one of which did not end until midnight.

"Why did it have to snow today?" grumbles Willie Payne, school custodian, while he labors to clear the school sidewalks.

Days of Contribution

Plays produced, services rendered, publications edited—all fill these days and encourage individual contribution.

Forgetting Typewriters, Pictures, Deadlines

Deviating from the perpetual, monotonous clickety-clack of typewriters and the groans of copy writers with overdue captions, the Blue and Gray staff decided to try its hand at making posters, inflating balloons, hanging crepe paper, and various other phases of preparing for their Leap Year Dance. The party, sponsored annually as part of an effort to alleviate the yearly tight budget and at the same time to help to pay the difference of cost between the customary black-and-white and the seldom used color pictures appearing in this year's book, took place on the twenty-ninth of February, the extra day of the year.

"But this is the fifth afternoon this week!" wailed staff members as they worked after school striving to surpass the performance of the 1963 annual, which won All-American and Medalist ratings.

"Nobody leaves 'til midnight!" threatens Managing Editor Martha Reichard to an overworked staff before a deadline.

"I'll get them!" chuckles Layout Editor Martha McGill as she sadistically thinks up impossible chores for her staff members.

Blue and Gray Sponsors Leap Year Dance

"Where did I get such talent?" wonders senior Sports Editor, Dave Schlottler, as he marvels at his football copy and his own creativity.

"My tongue is stuck!" jokes Herman Menzer at the annual White House Christmas party.

"What do I do now?" inquires Nancy Zurich as she attempts to tackle the intricacies of a complicated Blue and Gray camera.

Checking layouts, Advertising Manager Lynn Ferneyhough and Gail Helm review the ad section.

Pausing to decipher a name, Rose Carmichael, Blue and Gray typist, compiles lists for the yearbook index.

As Staff Rushes to Complete Assignments

"No! No! Never!" insists Martha McGill, layout editor, triumphantly bursting the bubbles of a frustrated staff member, Elizabeth Underwood, and disappointed Picture Editor, John Williams, during an evening session of Blue and Gray.

CROSSED SABRES

Staff Increases Results in Additional Features, News

Contrary to popular belief, editors of Crossed Sabres do not scream "stop the presses!" or call for the copy boy. Rather, the staff devotes its time fifth period and after school looking up obscure facts, locating lost pictures, thinking up different story ideas and trying to make copy fit into the allotted lines. However, various changes in procedure and organization forced several adjustments in operation. Increases in the size of the staff enabled the newspaper to initiate a rotating system for writing editorials, add sophomores as reporters and include a girl to cover the activities of GAA. The expansion of news services such as the student council column also resulted from the additions.

"There is no x in dog!" Mr. William Cleary, sponsor of the Crossed Sabres, corrects erring editor-in-chief, Peggy Coffman.

CROSSED SABRES FEATURE STAFF—Pete Koper, Anne Tienken—Assistant Feature Editors, Gail Webster—Feature Editor, Nancy Sawyer—Associate Feature Editor.

"I'm a thinker, not a worker," reflects Crossed Sabres Business Manager Charlie Brewer, waking from a nap.

PENMAN

Penman Staff Sells May Daisies on First

Most of the important days which occurred between September and June received a proper amount of attention. Clubs held dances, students attended assemblies and people decorated bulletin boards with suitable themes. The members of the Penman staff discovered that the school had unintentionally slighted May Day each year, and they proposed to do something about it. As a result of this decision, the student body arrived on the first of that month to find the magazine crew at the doors of the building, selling daisies to put cheerfully in everybody's empty buttonholes.

When not busy filling the school with the aroma of fresh flowers, the staff enticed the nose by cooking hot popcorn at 2:45. Countless numbers of students went to buses, meetings, and detention with a box of Penman's wares in their hands.

"Remember when I misplaced that short story?" laughs Steve Noll as editor-in-chief Bob Skinner looks at the Penman.

PENMAN ART CLUB

Artists Continue to Fight Behind the Scene Battles

With members perched in various precarious positions, the weekly meeting of the Penman Art Club came to order, relatively speaking. The artists studied the stories and poems provided them by the student body, via the Penman staff, and searched for inspiration that would lead the way to suitable illustrations. Sometime not too long afterward, they submitted the preliminary sketches to the magazine for approval. At the conclusion of considerable battling between the literary and artistic segments, the two groups finally agreed on both the meanings and the aesthetic values of the pictures in question. The warriors, temporarily satisfied, withdrew to re-arm for the next issue.

"But I don't even understand the story," mutters Sally Witkege to co-workers as she plans an illustration for the Penman.

Reading the minutes of the last meeting, Rachel Lewis, Student Council secretary, stops to make a minor correction.

"Who put this on here?" laughs Student Council president Bob Meyerson, as he checks a suggestion list for future projects.

Pausing to make a suggestion, Miss Jane Elliot, Student Council sponsor, keeps the meeting going smoothly.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Council Spends Summer Collecting Football Ads

Spending the vacation tramping from store to store asking local merchants to advertise in the football programs, the Student Council began their long list of projects for the coming school year. Members met each week during the summer months formulating plans for such activities as the Sophomore Orientation program, the Leadership Training Conference and the Alumni Dance.

As their annual charity donation, the council held a Cancer Drive in early January, striving not only to collect money but also to inform the individual of the dangers of lung cancer and cigarette smoking. With the help of the Student Council and the local cancer unit, many addicted smokers broke the habit through the smoking workshop.

Contemplating expenses, Student Council treasurer Winkie Norris figures the cost of publicity for the Cancer Drive.

Checking the calendar, senior senators Jo Gregg and Neil Shawen coordinate class and Council plans.

Relaxing after a meeting, Bruce Jolly points out an interesting article to fellow vice-president Larry Kener.

Discussing plans for the Alumni Dance, junior senators Chris Mudd and Jack Loder make suggestions about a band.

Planning yearly projects, Sally Peck and Philip Bjorlo, sophomore senators, puzzle over an unsolved problem.

"The flutes should be louder," directs Karl Netting, orchestra president, from the stage wings during practice.

ORCHESTRA

Orchestra Selects, Plays Repertoire for Assemblies

Music of Brahms, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Hanson often flowed from the orchestra room during sixth period this year. While practicing for the performances given throughout the year, the students worked on a variety of music before the conductor selected the final compositions for the concerts.

Keeping up with the festivities of the seasons the orchestra played for the student body at the Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter assemblies. Gaining additional experience by performing before an audience, the students had the opportunity to accompany the choir in both the spring and Candlelight concerts. The annual program for the sixth graders of Arlington County concluded the year's activities of the Washington-Lee Orchestra.

CHOIR

Cameras, Microphones Record Choral Program

In their first performance of the year, the Choir participated in the Y.W.C.A. World Fellowship Service at the Washington National Cathedral in November. Two weeks later, television viewers nationwide heard the group on "Lamp Unto My Feet."

At Christmas, the Choir and Orchestra combined to present a concert, their annual gift to the community. After the performance, members of both groups joined alumni at a reception in the Little Theater. Rising early on Easter morning, members sang at a Sunrise Service at the Netherlands Carillon. The April Spring Concert, in which the Choir presented a repertoire including both sacred and secular music, climaxed the year.

"The tenors missed that last note," laughs Washington-Lee Choir President Cynthia Denbo as she supervises the musicians.

Practicing for the Christmas Concert, tenors Rens Swan and Neil Shawen join fellow students of the Washington-Lee Choir in a carol in order to prepare for the annual program given to the community as a gift by the Music Department.

CONCERT BAND

Band Members Perform At All-State Convention

By sending nine members to the All-State Band in Alexandria this year, the Concert Band maintained its reputation of having outstanding musicians. During the festival, which extended over a weekend, two W-Lites made "first chair" in their respective sections. However, the organization did not limit itself to competitive performances. Alternating practice sessions with the orchestra, the band prepared music for two school assemblies, one in the winter and one in the spring. The musicians also presented a Vesper Concert at Christmas time and a formal concert before Easter. The profits went for purchasing more musical supplies.

"I can't hold this note much longer," thinks Pete Bradshaw as he practices his saxophone with members of the Concert Band.

and Ernie Buck review their interpretation of "When the Saints Go Marching In" for presentation at a game.

Braving bitter fall weather, the Washington-Lee Marching Organization practiced its maneuvers for the Friday night games. Occasionally working with the majorettes and cheerleaders, the Marching Musicians created intricate patterns for half-time entertainment at the annual Thanksgiving Day Game. Present at all football events, the musical team tackled the difficult problem of arousing school spirit from within the bundled mass of spectators by warming the vocal chords of the confetti-throwing students with enthusiastic songs such as "W-L Will Shine," "Generals Born", and "When the Saints Go Marching In."

Members of Girls' Choir Recruit Future Vocalists

Dressed in blue skirts and gray sweaters, members of the Girls' Choir visited Stratford and Kenmore Junior High Schools. Hoping to recruit future vocalists in the audience, they sang an inspiring arrangement of "America The Beautiful" as a climax to the special afternoon assembly presentation.

Combined with the Washington-Lee Concert Band, the girls presented Vincent Youman's popular "Without A Song" and "Drums In My Heart" during the traditional Spring Concert held in April. Wearing colorful pastel dresses to add gaiety to the evening members attended a formal reception in the Little Theatre after the performance.

Practicing arpeggios, Ginny Prater and Nancy Perdue, members of the Girls' Choir, prepare for the February Choral Concert.

MIXED CHORUS

Mixed Chorus Performs With Choir, Band

Making its initial performance for the school at the Christmas Vesper Concert, the Mixed Chorus began a busy schedule of activities. Their feature number, "Christ Was Born on Christmas Day," included solo and group parts. The Spring Concert, given in cooperation with the Concert Band, highlighted selections by popular American composer, Vincent Youman, and "Onward Ye Peoples," by Jean Sibelius. As its final program for the year, the group combined with the Choir for a school assembly late in the month of April.

One of the most popular activities among the singers helped to determine the members of the coming year's chorus. In February the boys and girls, while excused from regular classes, took trips to Stratford and to Swanson Junior High Schools for the purpose of finding those interested in entering the Washington-Lee music department.

MADRIGALS

Madrigals Tour Building; Carols Resound in Halls

Wearing black suits and dresses with gay boutonnieres and corsages, the Washington-Lee Madrigals roamed the halls singing Christmas carols before the annual vacation began. The members also performed Yuletide favorites while appearing on a live television program. They selected songs for the broadcast from their concert repertoire.

For the first time in the history of the Madrigals, the twelve members sang at a wedding. The students appeared at the request of the bride who formerly attended Washington-Lee. Wearing floor-length formals and tuxedos, the group presented a special program of solemn music for the occasion. After the ceremony, several of the singers attended and helped with the reception festivities.

Thoughtful Elos Responds To Supreme Court Case

Supreme Court decisions in general have had little direct effect on high school honor societies, but the case on Bible readings proved an exception. Unwilling to leave homerooms without material to read in the mornings, Elos accepted the responsibility of compiling a booklet of thought-provoking quotations. Early in the first semester each section received a copy of "Thoughts," selected, printed, and distributed by members of the honor society.

In December, Elos turned the tables and asked students for thoughts in the form of manuscripts for the short story contest. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors submitted entries ranging from true-to-life experiences to pure fiction. The society honored the best story writer at the awards assembly.

GERMAN HONOR SOCIETY

Tongue-tied Tyrols Take Time to Tackle Twisters

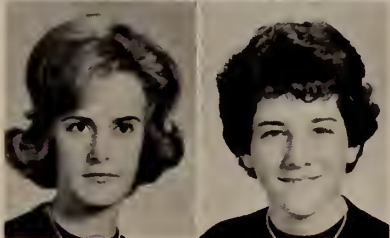

"Bierbraurer Brauer braut braun Bier," chanted tongue-tied German Honor Society members during a fall meeting. Open to German students with an "A" average, the society occupied its time by playing charades, attempting tongue-twisters and took vocabulary tests trying to master the language.

The climax of the year came as the club visited a local Bavarian restaurant where the honor students received their pins with the imperial German eagle. At this final meeting the senior members said farewell in their recently acquired language.

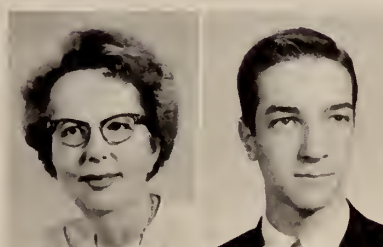

"You forgot the umlaut," corrects vice-president Clayton Day as German Honor Society president Terry Cox composes a speech.

FRENCH HONOR SOCIETY

Society Treats Residents to French Carols

"Les cantiques de Noel," French Christmas carols, greeted residents of the Quincy Street-Military Road area one cold December evening when members of the French Honor Society walked singing in the streets. A number of appreciative listeners invited the carolers in to warm up before blazing fires. The idea grew from the musical enthusiasm of the society sponsor which he passed to his students by teaching them French songs from various historical periods and for well-known religious and secular festivals.

Society members presented a light comedy in the spring, "Apollon du Bellac" by a contemporary French playwright, Jean Giraudoux. He described three young girls who discovered that they could reach the heart of any man by repeating to him one simple formula. "Comme vous êtes beau!"

Society Members Conduct Help Sessions

Monday and Tuesday afternoon help sessions occupied members of the Latin Honor Society as they toiled to complete the number of points required for membership. In cooperation with the faculty, the honor students assisted pupils having problems in understanding the basics of the language.

During regular monthly meetings, the society viewed slides taken by their sponsor on a recent vacation in Egypt and watched as, according to tradition, inductees presented skits from Roman and Greek mythology. To supplement this entertainment, committees prepared parties for Christmas and the get-together which ended the year. Members interspersed these social activities with discussions, furthering their knowledge of Latin.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Glamour of Drama, Stage Beckons Honor Students

"All right, quiet over there!" admonished a National Honor Society member to his fellow students as part of the club's program to take over a homeroom or first period class for a late teacher. The honor students also served as tutors for pupils having difficulties understanding the principles of the social studies and language arts.

With the purpose of keeping the entire student body informed of cultural events in the area, the society maintained a bulletin board with listings of theatrical productions and concerts. Members used this information to plan visits to various performances in Washington, including group trips to see Good Morning, Miss Dove, with Helen Hayes, and Stop the World—I Want to Get Off.

QUILL AND SCROLL

Publications Staffs Battle For Society Membership

Hoping that fierce competition would result in better publications, sponsors of the Blue and Gray, Crossed Sabres and Penman placed great restrictions on the number of staff members admitted to Quill and Scroll. Workers on the newspaper and yearbook constantly added up points given for outstanding service and sought the necessary support needed for membership in the honor society. Reward came at the fall induction when seven editors received the pin given by the national organization. Later at a special spring picnic prominent senior staff writers achieved their goal of joining the sought-after journalism honor society.

SCIENCE HONOR SOCIETY

Society Peddles Balloons, Surprises Football Fans

Suddenly in the midst of an exciting football game someone said "There goes one!" and all heads turned upward to watch a bright blue balloon disappear into the sky. This odd spectacle occurred more than once, as Science Honor Society members sold the helium-filled toys to earn extra money.

In May the group made a special weekend trip to New York to see the World's Fair. As well as visiting displays from foreign countries, potential scientists explored the most recent advances in industry. Favorite displays named by returning travelers included the Bell telephone "group conversation" innovations, the mono-rail, IBM computers and the Fair symbol, the Unisphere.

Segovia Concert Teaches Spirit of Spain

Believing that the study of a country's music would give the real key to learning about it, the Spanish Honor Society made a trip into Washington, D. C. to hear Andre Segovia play the guitar.

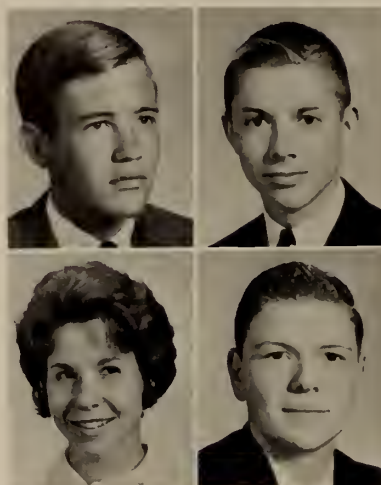

In the spring the group coordinated a meeting of Spanish honor organizations of the local high schools. Participants chatted in the foreign language and discussed learning and study techniques employed by the respective schools.

An induction of members closed out the year, with newcomers providing the entertainment in the form of impromptu skits in Spanish.

Students Complete Book After Six Years of Work

Completing a project begun in 1958, Speaker's Bureau edited a book entitled A History of Washington-Lee. Members, interviewing graduates and exploring old yearbooks, searched for anecdotes to supplement three scrips of past assemblies.

Various other services performed by the group included announcing athletic events, broadcasting daily bulletins and recording for the blind. The annual "How to Study" skit presented to the sophomores by the Speaker's Bureau illustrated proper study habits necessary for senior high school.

"May I have your attention, please . . ." Bureau member, Gregg Hansen, takes his turn making morning student announcements.

TIKOS

Computer Intrigues Tikos; Members Solve Equations

Visiting the National Education Association, math enthusiasts watched as a computer solved a problem in statistics. After meeting and talking to teachers who taught math at Washington-Lee in the past, a few students tried to operate the machine.

Helping students to decide upon a career, an associate director of the Bureau of Standards described jobs available in the field of mathematics and presented a program on "orders of magnitude." A teacher from Boston gave a lecture which included maps and drawings on the "history of math and man from ancient to modern civilization."

THESPIANS

Drama Society Produces Tragedy, Light Comedy

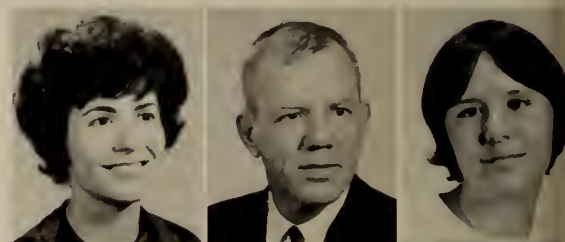

Arthur Miller, a contemporary playwright, working with one of the most dramatic periods of modern American history, provided the Thespians with a powerful script for their play of the year. The Crucible, a tale of witchcraft in Salem, Massachusetts, paralleled in many aspects the McCarthy trials of the early 1950's. To provide a contrast to this sombre theme, the dramatists presented My Three Angels, a light-hearted comedy, in February.

After the two full length productions, Thespians took advantage of the free time to prepare another, shorter event for the school. A number of the members who enjoyed giving monologue readings, delivered selections from some well-known works of great literature one evening in the Little Theater.

Switching on the lights for the Crucible, Thespian Jean Wattles performs her duties as Technical director.

ALPHA SERVICE CLUB

Alpha Members Present Post - Game Hootenanny

On a cold, wintry night in November after a vigorous football game, Alpha Service Club joined Omega in presenting a hootenanny. Singing a variety of popular as well as unfamiliar songs, several of Washington-Lee's own folk singers and one college group brought in a multitude of hand-clapping music lovers and a large profit.

Bringing Christmas cheer to a needy family, members gave gifts of much wanted food, clothing, toys, and gay decorations. Hoping to brighten the lives of many others, the club visited a rest home in Fairfax where they chatted with the patients, served refreshments, and sang Christmas carols. A toy drive whose proceeds went to various organizations completed the club's charitable work.

BETA CLUB

Beta Girls Go Haunting, Gathering Canned Goods

Tramping through the rain from house to house with the ghosts and goblins, members of National Beta Club braved the weather on Halloween night to collect canned goods for the Arlington Welfare Department. A few days later the girls transported the food to the county office for distribution to the poor families in the area.

In addition to its charitable projects, the club attempted to build enthusiasm for the Thanksgiving Day game with George Washington by sponsoring the annual Beta Bonfire. Watching with eager anticipation, the crowd cheered as a G. W. football player burned in effigy during the evening's proceedings. The girls also decorated a float, a replica of the Old Oaken Bucket, and entered it in the contest judged by students and teachers.

"Be nice to me or you'll be sorry!" jokes Linda Whitney to Martha Reichard as they collect food for a Beta Club project.

BETA SERVICE CLUB

Beta Surprises Villagers With Valentines in February

Members of Beta Service Club surprised Junior Villagers with an unannounced party early in February. The girls brought the children small gifts and entertained them by singing songs, making up stories and playing indoor games with them.

By holding bake sales, selling doughnuts and sponsoring a hootenanny, the organization earned enough money to contribute to numerous school activities, such as preparing baskets for the needy at Christmastime and aiding the school in the beautification of the Quincy Street entrance to the building.

However, convinced that they deserved a rest, the girls obtained the use of a member's home.

"Oops, I goofed again," laughs Ginny Croft to Terry Lucas as they complete Valentine favors for children in local hospitals.

Music, Art Provide Inspiration for Writers

Most students at Washington-Lee felt they had more than enough writing assignments to do during the year, but a few of them insisted on going out of their way to seek more. They made up the core of the Creative Writing Club. At each meeting the enthusiasts provided a different stimulus for the theme. They used modern and classical paintings, music and objects in the classroom where they met. After devoting part of the time to creating, the members spent the rest of the session destroying, or criticising, what they had just finished writing.

The club did not limit itself to its own work as study material. In the fall, before Karl Shapiro's lecture at the Library of Congress, they analyzed his poems to learn something from an expert.

"I wonder what it means?" ponders Shirley Kincaid as she and other creative writers examine a painting seeking inspiration.

DEBATE CLUB

Debaters Study, Discuss Health Problems of Aged

"What can an old man do but die?" Using this as an argument, the affirmative members of the Debate Club tried to convince their opponents that the government should provide medical care for the aged. In order to prove or disprove this point, debaters spent hours quizzing the Veterans' Administration, the Social Security Board and the National Health Service. The struggle to work out a logical case, gain sufficient evidence and perfect their speaking ability occupied at least four hours after school each week. The climax of this labor came in February and March as team members traveled all over Northern Virginia as part of the regular season, and varsity members went to Charlottesville for the state competition.

"But blondes do have more fun!" argues senior Jim Brodsky, as he and Marcus Parsons perform a mock debate for their club.

DELTA SERVICE CLUB

Delta Holds Hootenanny, Ends Financial Problems

Taking advantage of a current trend in music to add to their treasury, Delta girls presented a hootenanny following a home football game. Local singers provided the entertainment. Members used part of their profits to purchase shoes for children of a deserving family and to contribute to the Quincy Street entrance improvement project drive.

As their project for the second semester, the service organization chose renovating the interior of the "white house," home of school publications. Working on free Saturdays, volunteers attacked problem grime on walls and woodwork, while the more creative made curtains for downstairs windows.

Struggling to maintain her balance, senior Lynn Riggles measures a White House window for curtains made by Delta Club.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION CLUB

Students Tour Local Business Warehouses

With paper and pencil in hand, members of the Distributive Education Club visited various business establishments in order to take notes on the principles of buying and selling. They toured the local warehouses of Safeway Supermarket and Hecht Company Department Store.

During the year numerous speakers traveled to Washington-Lee to discuss business-related topics with students. The Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce spoke about the fundamentals of retailing and wholesaling and about the value of industry in a nation's economy today. Hoping to aid pupils in selecting an occupation, the supervisor of Safeway described different vocations open to young adults in the field of trade and commerce.

Gaining practical experience, Distributive Education student Michael Cave operates the cash register for the school store.

Boys Turn to Athletics, Cheer, Play Basketball

"Two bits, four bits, six bits, a dollar . . ." Eta Service Club came to the aid of the "Kappa Kollidors" and the Sigma girls' team and added to the gaiety of the cold evening as they cheered at the annual powder-puff football game. After participating in this unusual form of exercise, the boys turned to more traditional athletic events by challenging Omega to a track meet and the Key Club members to a basketball game.

In an effort to replenish their treasury and perform a service to the school at the same time, the organization sponsored "Signal 30" at the beginning of March. The group donated the proceeds of the movie, which dealt with the hazards of driving, to the Quincy Street Entrance Project.

"And so then I said to him . . ." jokes Stan Winston to members Bob Skinner and Dick Tomlinson at an Eta Club meeting.

French Club Hawks From Pastry Wagon

How often can you see a street vender in the halls after school? As often as the French Club wants to supply one. To the delight of their student patrons, members of the group sold chocolate eclairs on an average of once a week.

Familiarizing themselves with continental customs, the organization had a speaker whose slides of Europe supplemented his talk. They sponsored a presentation of the movie, "Mon Oncle," and took a trip on a Tuesday evening in the month of March to the French restaurant, Napoleon's.

At a New Year's celebration the group had a cake with two nickles baked inside. Members chose their pieces with care, knowing that the ones who got the coins became king and queen of the day.

"Une tarte, s'il vous plaît?" asks Mr. Kjell Svendsen as he buys pastry from Ann Hiatt, Jean Halliburton and Noelle Le Foll.

After-School Help Sessions Aid Students

"And therefore, we wish to say . . .," dictated a member of Future Business Leaders of America as she helped a fellow classmate practice shorthand during one of the after-school help sessions sponsored by the career organization. Unprecedented in the history of the club, the project resulted in spare time for teachers and in improved clerical skills for the pupils.

Making use of the talents they had practiced, FBLA members published a Newsletter for all business students. The bi-monthly paper dealt mainly with events concerning the commercial world, such as the dates of the entrance examinations for the local technical institutions and the prospective jobs available for June graduates.

FUTURE HOMEMAKERS OF AMERICA

Members Honor Alumni At Christmas Reception

Greeting alumni as they returned to Washington-Lee for the Christmas vacation, members of the Future Homemakers of America held an informal reception in the school living room after the traditional holiday assembly. The girls served various types of refreshments and beverages which they had made earlier in their food classes.

Amusing the handicapped children in Arlington County Hospital, students gave a party during the fall months. The members played games and sang to the patients. A quiet period of reading their favorite stories to them followed the physical activity. Before leaving the girls presented each child with a toy which they had sewn during the school year.

"Ten inches—ten cents." yells President Elizabeth Conant, as she determines the admission fee to the Homemakers' Foot Hop.

Gibson, Kathy Bauer, Carol David. Back Row: Julene Babbel, Linda Hitch, Bonnie June Babbel, Maxine Parrott, Sharon Haid, Mary Taylor.

Pupils Explore Familiar Field of Teaching

Panel discussions, a bulletin board, participation in evaluating educational television shows all came into play as Future Teachers of America increased their potential as educators. Working for this goal, the girls conducted a survey of colleges offering strong education programs. Members rated schools as to variety of teaching fields, as well as efficiency of techniques.

Realizing the necessity for greater organization, the club decided to draw up a constitution. A committee appointed by the president prepared a document from a model offered by national offices. Aided by their government and law-teaching sponsor, the group completed and ratified the charter.

Hoping to attract members, Ann Hiatt, Jean Halliburton and Sally Bowden tack information on Future Teachers of America.

GAMMA SERVICE CLUB

Blankets Vanish During Gamma's Slumber Party

"Who took my blanket?" inquired not Linus of Peanuts, but a sleepy eyed member of Gamma at the annual slumber party the club held at a member's home. Getting acquainted with those who had just joined this year, the girls had a raid on the ice box at midnight and stayed up all night.

Aware of the purposes of a service club, they took part in community projects. Thinking of the many needy families in Arlington, the group prepared a basket of food at Thanksgiving and took it to the Welfare Department. When Christmas rolled around the club helped out at the post office selling TB stamps. As a service to W-L, Gamma worked in the attendance office and contributed money for the beautification of the Quincy Street entrance.

Planning the years' activities, Gamma members Mary Shaffer and Christina Ranea review past projects done by their service club.

Club Provides Chance for Daily Workouts

Reorganized this spring, the Health Club attracted the membership of those boys interested in achieving the peak of physical fitness. Providing an opportunity for daily workouts, the group appropriated the gym each afternoon, set up its equipment and offered instruction in tumbling, weight lifting, rope climbing and the use of the straight and parallel bars and the trampoline.

Designed for all boys, not just those participating in organized sports activities or physical education classes, the organization lured approximately thirty members when it began in mid-March. Because of policy changes initiated by this year's sponsor, girls no longer had membership privileges as they had in previous years.

"Steady!" warns Tim Henderson atop a pyramid composed of determined seniors Robert Counts and Ron Knipling.

"Only fifty more to go . . ." laughs Tim Henderson to senior Ron Knipling as he does sit ups in an attempt to get in shape for the recently organized Health Club, formed to keep boys not participating in other sports physically fit.

I.C.T. CLUB

Area Talent Competition Highlights Club Activities

Excitement filled the air as participants in the Industrial Cooperative Training Clubs district meeting competed for awards as best area students. An auto mechanics worker from Washington-Lee won first place in his field by finding the flaws in seven cars and repairing them in about one hour. In the annual talent contest, a nurses' aide came in third with her dance recital. On March 13, 14 and 15 winners of the Northern Virginia competition traveled to the state-wide Diversified Occupations Clubs contest held in Williamsburg.

Late in April members of the I.C.T. program held an Employee-Employer Banquet attended by all students and their professional sponsors. Varied occupational groups enjoyed exchanging experiences and adventures in their search for jobs.

Completing her chore, junior Bonita Crowley, Nurses' Aide at Arlington Hospital, works at her assigned task of making beds.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

Linguists Eat Delicacies At Foreign Restaurants

"Darf ich Sie zu einem Glas Wein einladen?" asked an International Club member during one of their dinners at a local German restaurant. The organization visited numerous eating places this year, sampling various delicacies such as Italian pizza, Mexican enchiladas and Chinese chow mein. Although it proved a bit difficult for some, they sought to converse and to order their meals in the foreign language of the establishment.

Improving pronunciation techniques, the club divided into three sections during the weekly meetings to discuss, in the native language, the traditions and customs of France, England and Germany. The students obtained a more realistic picture of the distant nations through these open discussions.

"No, that's not the right angle!" directs Graciela Farinas to Margarita Cabrera as she tacks posters on the bulletin board.

KAPPA SERVICE CLUB

Kappa Beautifies School With Flowers, Curtains

Kappa Service Club, after having decided to help beautify Washington-Lee, planted two rows of tulip bulbs underneath the office windows, invited a beauty counselor to the school to give a talk on how to wear makeup, and touched up the girls' room on the third floor with yellow paint and brightly colored curtains.

Other events and projects which led up to the gaining of the Club of the Quarter Award for the first nine weeks included a "Powder Puff" football game against rivals, Sigma Service Club, complete with boy cheerleaders and coaches from the varsity football team, and the giving of Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets and clothes to the needy.

"I like this one!" decides Jane Chewning as she and Maristev Doyle sort records for a Kappa open house.

KEY CLUB

Spattered Painters Decorate Parking Lot

Clad in work clothes and overalls, Key Club members began early in the school year to beautify the landscape. First, artistic students pitched in and painted white lines on the parking lot, as more aggressive boys pulled vines from the bushes encompassing the area. Finally, the association donated and installed a nylon rope and clamps for the senior court flag pole. Demonstrating school spirit, the members constructed a float resembling a football field on wheels, which won second place in the Thanksgiving Day contest.

However, not all their activities fell into the school service category. Performing tasks for the community, the group sold peanuts for Kiwanis Club and fought their way out of a monstrous stack of envelopes by stuffing, sealing, and preparing letters for mailing at county tuberculosis, cancer and heart association offices.

KEYETTES

Keyettes Sponsor Drive, Supply Corps With Books

Keyettes came to their Tuesday meetings with armfuls of children's books this year, cooperating with the plan to aid the Peace Corps. In order to gain the school's support, the girls placed many bright posters at strategic points in the school and wrote bulletins for announcement in homerooms and over the public-address system.

Providing love and attention through letters, the Keyette Club also supplied an orphan in Korea with gifts for her birthday and Christmas. These presents included clothing and toys. To raise the money necessary for such expenditures, the members held a dance during the middle of February.

"Has anyone seen my date?" inquires senior Karl Netting as he enters a dance given by the Key and Keyette club members.

"That's my favorite grape joke" laughs Patsy Matthews as she discusses plans for a book drive with fellow Keyettes.

"This one looks interesting," reflects Toni Biordi, glancing at a book for the Keyette Peace Corps drive.

LIBRARY CLUB

Club Members Give Up Study Halls, Spare Time

Working during study halls as well as before and after school, the members of the Library Club dedicated themselves to helping run the school's library more effectively and efficiently. Their duties included working at the attendance and circulation desks, assisting in the periodical room and shelving returned books. They also served in the workroom, repairing torn and soiled texts.

Meeting once a month, or oftener if necessary, the organization heard numerous speakers and made plans for their two annual projects, National Book Week in the fall and Library Week in the spring. The club also went on a guided tour of the Library of Congress and to the Museum of Natural History and Technology, a branch of the Smithsonian.

"This book has been overdue two months!" exclaims Gail Pettengill to library assistants Donna Stancill and Ann Martaus.

MAJORETTES

Twirlers Perform During Half-Time Shows

Providing entertainment at football games and Booster meetings took up every spare moment Major-ettes could find. Practicing three to four times a week, the girls reorganized their basic routines to increase the variety of presentations.

In February members of the squad participated in the George Washington Twirling Tournament competition. Their efforts, judged on timing, originality and ability, included a trio, duet and solo.

Closing the year, the girls held a majorette clinic once a week to teach interested students a little about baton twirling. Junior high sessions gave next year's sophomores a chance to try their skill. At the final meeting, tryouts for the coming season determined next year's team.

MOUNTED GENERALS

Exhibiting Various Skills, Members Present Show

Displaying the horsemanship abilities of the school, Mounted Generals held their annual Horse Show in late April. Perfecting the skills necessary for winning the prized Challenge Trophy, the members practiced once a week in nearby Fairfax. The requirements for this loving cup included the proper execution of walking, cantering and trotting. Runners-up received ribbons and smaller trophies for their hard work.

Presenting a movie on the British Horse Derby during one of the weekly meetings, the club learned various hints about riding horses. The group donated the proceeds obtained from the admission charges to the United States Equestrian Team so it could travel to Tokyo for the World Olympics.

"Steady, boy," soothes junior Kathy Monahan as she secures the bridle before riding with Mounted Generals.

MATH CLUB

Club Arouses Enthusiasm in Mathematics

Organized during the spring of last year and still in its formative stages, the Math Club offered a chance to discuss and study mathematics to all those students interested in this subject. In order to arouse enthusiasm in the field, the officers planned various programs in which members of the club gave reports and an official from the Bureau of Standards spoke. In conjunction with this report, the organization went on a tour of the Bureau during the middle of March.

Prevented from meeting on two different occasions because of snow days, the members still managed to form a constitution and began to organize a system for membership which included earning points by reporting on Math books.

"This'll take some deep thinking," muses John Lewis, as he attempts to solve a puzzling equation for Math Club members.

NU SERVICE CLUB

Nu Girls Spread Cheer, Donate Food to Family

Helping to spread the Christmas spirit to less fortunate individuals, members of the Nu Service Club filled two baskets of food and took them to a family in the Washington area. After delivering the articles, the girls remained for a while and amused the family's three children.

With pajamas and rollers in hand, members attended a slumber party held in the basement of the president's home. A pot luck supper, in which each of the girls contributed a beverage or part of the meal, preceded the party.

Selling candy and cookies from house to house provided a way to earn money. Students gave these funds in the form of a one hundred dollar scholarship to a senior girl at Washington-Lee.

"Ugh! What horrible glue!" groans Sandie Denman to Gail Helm as they lick and stuff envelopes for the tuberculosis center.

PEP CLUB

Members of Pep Club Decorate Football Goals

With crepe paper and glue in hand, hardy Pep Club members braved the weather to decorate Washington-Lee's goal posts with blue and gray streamers. One of the seven committees further supported the teams by cutting out miniature paper basketballs or footballs and taping them on the players' lockers and the walls. Another group made and distributed "Go Generals" tags among the student body.

On the day of an important sports event, the Washington-Lee cheerleaders met with the Pep Club in the cafeteria and taught students gestures and cheers. During the games, members sat in a special reserved section on the fifty-yard line. Many pupils made humorous signs and banners which they displayed after scoring a touchdown.

OMEGA SERVICE CLUB

School Talent Performs For Omega Hootenanny

Sprawling students filled the gym, clapping and singing wholeheartedly to the strains of folk music presented by area high school performers at the Omega-Alpha hootenanny. The profits from the fall song fest provided the boys with funds to support proposed future projects.

Chosen Club of the Quarter during the second marking period, Omega participated in local charity drives. During October the club battled stormy weather to collect money for UNICEF. The organization came to the aid of the wife of a Washington policeman slain in January. The boys assisted the family by giving money and helping around the home.

"Where have all the flowers gone?" sing "Bob and Sandy" at an Omega Service Club hootenanny held in the Little Theatre.

RESCUE SQUAD

Squad Co-ordinates Drills, Aids Student Evacuations

"We could all file out of the building, then head for the bowling alley," suggested one member as the Rescue Squad assisted in planning effective fire exit routes and directed students in evacuating procedures during school drills.

Competing against its rival, Wakefield, the group demonstrated quick thinking and proper first aid techniques by answering tricky situation questions and applying acquired skills to the problem. Judged on their performances, in comparison with other contestants, winners received trophies for themselves as well as for the school.

"A little tighter," suggests Gene Loughran to Lee Price and John Unmack while they apply a tourniquet during a practice.

SCHOOL STORE

Workmen Invade Store, Install Modern Cabinets

Striving to keep accurate records and balanced budget, workers in the School Store had trouble concentrating when noisy workmen invaded the establishment. The men brought modern formica-topped showcases to replace the wooden shelves and counters. Another distraction occurred when art pupils entered and transformed the walls into colorful murals which represented the "Tree of Knowledge" and a visitor's "Tour of the World."

Gaining valuable business experience, members of the Distributive Education Club learned how to operate a cash register and how to help busy students find and select needed materials.

"Change for a $10 bill?" queries junior Pat Lilly of her compatriot as they attempt to find change for a school store patron.

SCIENCE CLUB

Lecturer Explains Liesegang Rings, Agate

Science Club members dispelled the picture of the mad genius and ivory-tower professor usually connected with test tubes by exhibiting an active interest in worldly beauty. At one fall meeting, they heard a talk, accompanied with slides, which illustrated the function of Liesegang rings in the formation of agate, a semi-precious stone used in jewelry. For the more mechanically-minded, one visitor discussed recent improvements in the use of fuel cells, an important part of today's industry.

Aside from the opportunity to hear speakers, the club gave members the chance to visit places which they would not ordinarily have seen. They toured the Museum of Natural History in New York, Beltsville, and also the David Taylor Model Basin.

Checking a transmitter, senior Frank Bittinger and Ed Sproles review its parts during a monthly meeting of the Science Club.

SERVICE CLUB COUNCIL

Renamed Service Clubs Write Council By-laws

With the change in the Greek-letter clubs the school had to reorganize the council where the member organizations got together to co-ordinate activities and exchange ideas. Starting from scratch, they drafted a constitution which would meet their needs and determined the amount of dues each student involved would pay. The money collected went into two worthwhile projects, twenty dollars for the Cancer Fund and appropriations to purchase a juke box for next year's school dances.

Because the Parent-Teacher Association had always shown interest in the functions of the group, some of the boys on the Service Club Council wrote and put on informative skits at a spring meeting.

Sigma Triumphs in "Powder Puff" Game

"Go, Sigma, beat Kappa!" The cheers from the eight disguised boy cheerleaders rang out, filling the icy November night with encouragement as Sigma Service Club tangled with the Kappa "Kolliders" in the annual "Powder Puff" touch football game. Supplied with twenty clean jerseys donated by the junior varsity team, two varsity players for coaches, and one football, the girls prepared for the clash with the opposition by attending numerous afternoon school training sessions to acquaint them with the rules, techniques, and strategy of the unfamiliar game. Their diligent practices did not go unrewarded, as Sigma scored touchdown after touchdown to trounce the struggling "Kolliders."

SKI CLUB

Fitted With Skis, Poles, Beginners Attack Slopes

"Gee, that hill looks awfully steep!" wailed members of the Ski Club at first sight of the beginner's slope at Braddock Heights one cold, windy Saturday in early February. Having arrived at the lodge, members paid admission fees, then proceeded to the "Ski Shop" where an employee went through the process of elimination, trying many shoes on each person, in an attempt to find out what pair fit whom, and measured their height for both skis and poles.

Once on the slope, the president, a qualified instructor, gave lessons to the beginners in the morning and to the more advanced in the afternoon. The trip resulted in sore ankles, hands, legs, and aching backs lasting far into the following week.

"This isn't the way we practiced it!" mutters sophomore Bill Fink as he prepares to ski down a slope at Shawneeland Resort.

SOUND SERVICE

Club Operates Equipment To Prevent Catastrophes

Picture the entire student body assembled in the gymnasium on a Wednesday morning straining to hear a barely audible speaker. Except for the efforts of the hard-working Sound Service Club, Washington-Lee would look like this every week. Long before school began, the boys who belonged arrived to set up whatever equipment the occasion called for in order to prevent such a catastrophe.

Recorded music and the emcee's patter at the dances traveled through their lines. They provided for the play-by-play descriptions of football and basketball games, and the unusual effects at some of the plays resulted from the careful positioning of the electrical sound apparatus.

Making a slight adjustment, Chip Muzzey and Jim McCoy of the sound service prepare a microphone for the Beta Charity Ball.

SPANISH CLUB

Pinata, Speeches, Songs Brighten Spanish Party

Celebrating their Christmas Latin American-style, Spanish Club members listened to carols and volunteers gave short talks on the observation of the holidays in Argentina, Colombia and Venezuela. The group also combined their efforts to construct a pinata. The red, green and white object dangled over its pursuers as they tried to break it to get the candy and prizes hidden within the enticing cover.

Furthering their knowledge of Spanish and the people who speak it, the group took every possible opportunity to have guest speakers. One Chilean spokesman gave an hour's talk in his native tongue on the history and geography of that nation.

Valentine Day Drive Attracts Depositors

Valentines, cookies and punch brightened the Student Savings room as a second open account day this year gave high school pupils a chance to open a convenient savings account. The first depositer found himself rewarded with a ball point pen. Following usual banking procedures, the organization used signature cards, passbooks and a fifty cent deposit requirement. During the summer months the group transferred the money to the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, the sponsoring local bank.

Having a record year, the savings system took in about $73,000. Volunteers from bookkeeping managed the service for the benefit of those in the school who wished the added availability of having their money close by and in a safe place.

TAU SERVICE CLUB

Tau Creates Winning Thanksgiving Float

Sparkling green foil and chicken wire composed the annual Thanksgiving float made by members of Tau Service Club. The project won first prize and appeared at the bonfire and football game.

Helping less fortunate people, the girls traveled to St. Elizabeth's and visited with some of the patients. Students entertained them by singing songs, dancing and playing various instruments. During the Christmas holidays, the members distributed refreshments and gifts which they had made at Fall meetings.

During the fall and winter months, the organization unofficially adopted a Cuban refugee family living in Arlington County. The girls provided the children with clothes and gave them a special dinner on the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Amid rush and confusion, Cheryl Maxwell signs up to join Tau Service Club during an orientation period held in the cafeteria.

TEEN TYME

Password, Tick Tack Toe Supplement Bible Study

"I know the word" exclaimed an enthusiastic Teen Tyme member as he took part in games similar to Password and Tic Tac Toe. Participating in the contests in which they substituted Biblical names and places enabled them to acquire a greater knowledge of the Holy Book. Openings for the Tuesday afternoon meetings consisted of a scripture reading and a prayer chosen by the club members. The group either participated in informal discussions on subjects related to the Bible and religion or they invited the sponsors, alumni, or ministers to serve as a speaker. Adding to the regular session the students actively took part in the Youth for Christ organization at Kenmore Junior High.

THETA SERVICE CLUB

Tired Limbs Result From Planting 300 Tulip Bulbs

Digging holes on hands and knees for approximately three hundred tulips started the year for Theta Service Club. One Saturday ten of the girls spent several hours planting the flowers in various places around the school grounds with emphasis on the Quincy Street entrance and the senior court.

Halloween night Theta and other service clubs joined forces and went from door to door trick-or-treating for UNICEF. After collecting money for the children's organization, the girls sponsored a dance which featured a gypsy fortune teller and a prize for the best costume. Another social activity planned by Theta, a hootenanny featuring local talent from W-L and other high schools, took place after the first scheduled basketball game of the year.

TRANSCEIVERS

Transceivers' Equipment Receives Space Signals

Made of metal, a small container of approximately the same size as one-third of a three-by-five file box belonged to one of the Transceivers. Protected inside this deceptive covering lay a Science Fair project, a miniature high frequency device which, when, perfected, received intermittent telemetric signals from outer space; or in other words, picked up beeps from satellites in orbit.

The Transceivers' organization consisted of boys with an interest in the field of amateur radio equipment and an occasional hi fi enthusiast. They spent most of the club time working on projects. Other typical ventures included homemade mine detecting apparatus and various forms of simplified and complicated broadcasting systems.

Repairing the speaker of a faulty radio, Transceivers member Chris Spelling attempts to improve the sound magnification.

Vocational Club Assists Adult Education Program

Coming to the assistance of both the Attendance Office and Adult Education program, the Vocational Office Training Club spent time managing recently installed Data Processing equipment and making bulletins for the night school.

The club held its meetings during the evening so that members participating in the V.O.T. working system could engage in an extra-curricular activity. Replacing one of the sessions, the organization held its annual "Employer-Employee" banquet. Financed by a fall car wash, the dinner informed the group of developments in the business world.

Club Welcomes Sophomores on First Day

Provided with IBM sheets, a cheery smile and a reassuring voice, Welcome Club members greeted sophomores on the first day of school and assisted them in finding their homerooms. Earlier during the summer, the organization had made and placed bright posters at various spots around the school welcoming the underclassmen.

Responsible for explaining the school setup to visitors and students entering after September, the organization held guided tours which included the attendance, main and nurse's offices, the cafeteria and the library. In order to perform these services, members forfeited their study halls.

CHEERLEADERS

Telephone Solves Communication Problem

Advanced technology and modern methods of automation influenced the W-L Cheerleaders. Solving the problem of communication between the co-captains who lead the fans from opposite sides of the field, the Rescue Squad provided a telephone which the girls used to coordinate the cheers.

During the year, the cheerleaders practiced original cheers and novel ways to promote enthusiasm at athletic events. Preparing for the Wakefield game with a pep rally, the girls disguised themselves as Warriors and attacked the tent of the Generals situated in the middle of the gym.

Quincy Eleven Takes First Place in Area

Getting off to a disappointing start by tying both Fairfax and Patrick Henry, the Washington-Lee Generals regained lost prominence by going on to an undefeated season and a successful defense of the Northern Virginia Group 1-A crown. The first bright spot of the season came with a 21-0 victory over Marshall followed by a trouncing of county rival Yorktown, 41-7. Defense especially excelled as the Generals defeated O'Connell and Hammond by identical scores of 7-6. The General eleven then held both Annandale and Stuart scoreless.

Meeting top slated Wakefield next and leaving victorious, the varsity gridders went on to take George Washington and earn a tie for first place with McLean. Having faced tougher opponents than the Highlanders did, Washington-Lee won the title.

Local TV Broadcasts Oaken Bucket Game

Much to the dismay of the Marshall squad, senior end Dave Roylance leaps high to intercept a stray pass.

Clinching the Northern Virginia title in the last game of the season, the Generals smashed the George Washington Presidents 20-0. For the first time in its 28-year history, the encounter appeared on local television adding spectators to the 9,000 who watched the game in person.

Effective defensive and offensive plays accounted for the one-sided score. Ronald Deskins electrified the crowd with a 54-yard sprint late in the second quarter as the Quincy eleven relied mainly on their ground attack in moving the ball. The defense contributed to the cause with several key interceptions which enabled the General squad to avoid serious trouble. This victory gave the Generals the Northern Virginia Championship.

Bulldozing his way through Annandale tacklers, senior gridder Ron Deskins piles up yardage deep in enemy ground.

Jay Vee Squad Knocks Out 5-1-2 Record

With a slow beginning to a victorious season, the Little Generals tied St. Johns, suffered the only loss of the season at the hands of Marshall, and tied Yorktown. O'Connell provided the Junior Varsity with the first victory. Hammond fell to the sophomore gridgers 27-

20 in a game highlighted by a 35-yard touchdown pass in the final seconds. After trouncing Annandale the Jay Vee squeaked by Stuart with a score of 14-13 and concluded the season with a 14-6 victory over Wakefield.

CROSS COUNTRY

Harriers Finish Season by Taking Sixth Place

Struggling to defend their state championship, the 1963 Varsity Cross Country team placed third in Northern Virginia and sixth in the state. In his first season as coach, Mr. Jerry Power faced tough challengers Falls Church and Yorktown. The Harriers suffered the only losses of the season at the hands of Annandale and Hammond. Although they lacked experience, the Junior Varsity Cross Country team went undefeated. Sweeping past all their opponents, the Jay Vee captured the league crown.

VARSITY BASKETBALL

Close Games, Overtimes Characterize Competition

Battling their way through a successful campaign the Varsity Basketball team compiled a winning 15-4 record. Close, low-scoring games characterized the season for coach Morris Levin's team, which he described as one of his hardest working groups. The Quincy Street Five suffered from an unusual number of slow, deliberate overtime games.

In the season's first game, the Varsity roundballers, led by co-captains Larry Kener and Larry Boice, winner of the "Most Valuable Player" Award, defeated a tough George Washington team 41-38. Edison then fell to the Generals 42-40 in the first overtime game. Stuart ended W-L's 43-game winning streak when they defeated them in double overtime 38-36 on a last minute "gun shot." Wakefield lost to the General offense 49-38, but the Warriors returned to end team hopes in the Northern Virginia Tournament with a 46-35 defeat. County rival Yorktown lost 41-25 to the varsity, giving the hoopsters a winning note to end regular season play.

Planning his counter-strategy, Coach Morris Levin hurriedly prepares the varsity to expect the oncoming attack.

Extending a long arm toward the basket, sophomore John Hummer sends the ball on its way for a score against Stuart.

Picking off a loose ball, junior John Fenili breaks down court to set up a quick play against Falls Church.

Shooting from the corner, senior Larry Boice scoots the ball past the edge of the backboard for two points.

Tapping the ball to his teammate, Tommy Thompson out-jumps his opponent as he earns possession for the Generals.

Players Demonstrate Basketball Skills

In one of the toughest leagues in years, the Junior Varsity Basketball team completed the season by placing fifth in the standings. The team, coached by Mr. Glenn Causey, compiled a 9-7 record in the league competition and a 9-9 overall mark.

By beating Edison, the third ranked team, 37-30, the Jay Vee squad showed the most strength of the year. The Little Roundballers lost two close games to the Yorktown Patriots, 29-26, and 27-26, and could have won either. Playing on the Junior Varsity gave the boys the needed experience preparing them for Varsity play in the year to come.

Playing each of the four teams in the league twice, the Varsity marksmen out-shot all competition. Annandale gave the Generals the most opposition, as W-L's riflemen won the close meet by only six points. Woodson and Wakefield fell to the Generals also, giving the Washington-Lee squad an undefeated record in capturing the league crown.

Grapplers Place High in Area Competition

Strong league competition provided little difference to Coach Guy Cavallo and his Varsity Wrestling team as they earned a 14-3 record. The squad, co-captained by Rod Wilson and Jim Weeks, overcame inexperience to compile their winning record.

J.E.B. Stuart, fourth ranking league team, provided the Varsity grapplers with a rewarding 23-18 victory. W-L's Generals trounced the McLean Highlanders in a shut-out, rare in the sport, 48-0.

Kevin Gilead remained undefeated throughout the entire season but lost to the defending state champion in the Group 1-A tournament. Rod Wilson, the wrestling squad's only representative in the Virginia tournament, captured a fourth place, climaxing the year and putting the Matmen in 18th position among the top state competition.

"Countering the counter," jayvee grapplers Bruce Wint and Mark Lipsey run through wrestling maneuvers.

In his first year as Junior Varsity Wrestling Coach, Ellis Wisler piloted his squad, comprised largely of Sophomores, to a 6-2-1 season record.

Defeating Groveton 29-21 in their first match, the Little Generals dropped their second game to Annandale and tied O'Connell 26-26 in their third. Balancing their record, the Junior Varsity matmen won the next three successive meets, but bowed to Edison 27-15. Fired up for the last encounter of the season, the Jay Vee grapplers upset the undefeated Wakefield Warriors 23-22.

Capturing second place in the State tournament at V.M.I., the indoor track team, coached by Mr. Jerry Power, completed a successful season.

Individual runners competed in the first event of the year, the Georgetown Invitational, and also in the second, the Chesterfield Invitational. Team scores counted in the third meet, the D. C. Invitational, with W-L's Tracksters placing third. The Generals also downed Episcopal, 49-46, in the only single showdown of the year. Individual winners included Greg Fletcher in the hurdles, Steve Lyon in the middle distance runs, setting a record in the 880, and Harry Strother in the broad jump.

Outdoor Harriers Win Championship

Experience led the 1963 Varsity Outdoor Track team to a first place in Northern Virginia and a second place in the state. Bill Hiatt and Robert Elkins co-captained a team which Coach Jerry Power described as "one of my best in a long time."

A record breaking mile relay team comprised of Terry Donnelly, Greg Wheeler, Bill Hiatt, and Rob Elkins provided strength by their efforts. The successful group set a precedent of 3:25.4 seconds.

One of the first meets of the season resulted in a tie with the Wakefield Warriors. The Generals had their only loss of the year at the hands of Hammond, 68 to 45. However, the trackmen retaliated, defeating the Admirals during the Northern Virginia Group 1-A Tournament.

BASEBALL

Hardballers Place First In Group 1-A Tournament

Capturing their fourth straight first place in Northern Virginia tournament play, the 1963 Varsity Baseball team compiled a streak of twelve successive victories. The hardballers, co-captained by Charles Sievers and Tron Brekke, took an 11-3 record into the league play-off.

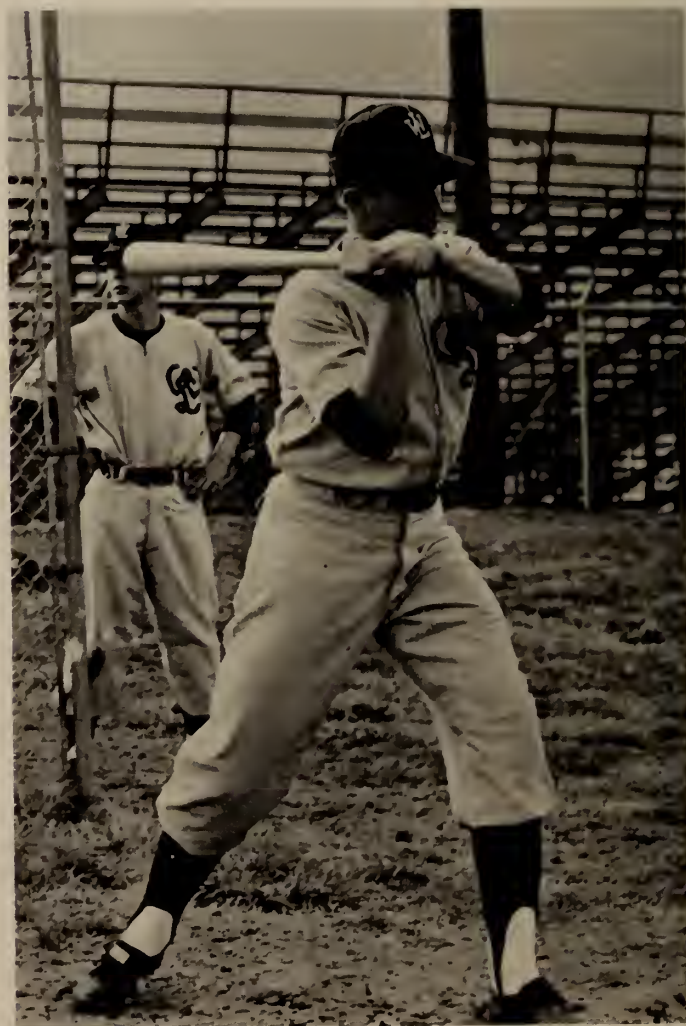

Following a tradition of coming in less than first in league play, the Generals finished second to Wakefield, the regular season winner. The Quincy Street Nine ended the year with a 14-6 record.

In the final game of the season the Groveton team hurled a no-hitter against the Generals. However, Washington-Lee won the game 4 to 3 by scoring all their runs on the Tigers' errors.

Heading for the play at second, senior Mike Foss catches the ball from first as he puts out the sliding Mike Bryant.

Digging for the bag, Mike Foss strains to beat the throw as senior Larry Boice stretches toward second and the ball.

Leaning into the ball, senior John Girtman looks for the pitch that he can send screaming to the outfield for a hit.

Jay Vee Gains Competitive Experience

Stretching his full length, jayvee baseman Rick Ford extends his arms for the ball hoping for a possible out.

Losing four games by two runs and seven games by only one run, the 1963 Junior Varsity Baseball team did better than their 3-13 record suggests. Coach Sal DeGiorgi, stressed the opportunity for every boy to play in all positions to gain experience as his main objective throughout the year.

Falling behind St. John by nine runs in the second game of the season, the Junior Varsity hardballers made this the outstanding encounter of the year by coming back and winning the ball game despite the odds against them. Two close games with Wakefield also highlighted the season.

Practice paid off as the racketmen placed third in Northern Virginia, outdone only by archrivals Yorktown and Wakefield. The beginning of the season found them at their best, defeating four teams in a row, and shutting out both J.E.B. Stuart and Woodson. Two close defeats followed suffered at the hands of Annandale and Yorktown. Wakefield administered the final loss of the year, forcing the team into the third place position. The end of Spring saw the Varsity courtmen, led by senior captain Spencer Smith, compiling a 5-2 Group 1-A record and a 7 to 4 over-all anding.

Smashing into the ball, captain of the tennis team, Ron Boykin, swings through his forehand return.

National Championship Ends in Tie

Stroking to one of the few dead-heats in the history of the sport, the members of the 1963 Varsity Crew tied the Admirals of Hammond in the National School-boy Rowing Championship. The first eight included John Bagwell, Jim Brasfield, Bill Clapp, Bob Cocker, Vaughn Esper, Bill Ingram, Greg Wynn, Steve Wynn, and Charlie Walker.

Starting the year with two disappointing losses to Hammond, the crew came back to defeat them once again and in the Northern Virginia Championships giving the Generals the league crown.

Crew Coach Charlie Butt and co-captains John Bagwell and Jim Brasfield led the rowers over Kent school for the first time in W-L's Crew history. The oarsmen also took the Stotesbury Cup regatta in Philadelphia. The second eight went undefeated through the season adding to the crew honors and ending the busy and victorious season.

Pulling their way through the murky waters, crew members practice on the barge for a varsity position.

"I rowed on the barge!" gloats senior oarsman John Rogers to envious Bob Counts as they sand down the oars.

"Take it up four and four!" commands the coxswain to the struggling Varsity eight as they paddle up river.

"Easy, easy now," cautions Tom Hamner as he and fellow members of his eight coax shell into the water.

Stotesbury National

"Ouch!" yelps senior oarsman Carl Anderson as he files down an oar in preparation for the season's first race.

"Fun . . . fun . . . fun," thinks junior crewman Rick Spauls as he jumps rope to build up endurance for the races ahead.

Championships, Fall to W-L Oarsmen

"I wonder how that got there" muses crew coach Charlie Butt as he sands off scars on the shell from past encounters.

Struggling to keep hold, crewmen Chris Mudd and Charlie Hunsaker carry a shell out of the boat house.

Returning the serve, Rose Carmichael fights to retain her balance during an afternoon G.A.A. match.

With grim determination, Marge Reese faces the ball while catcher Val Pribnow awaits the outcome.

G.A.A.

Female Athletes Raise Money Checking Coats

"That'll be ten cents please," came the reply from within the Lost and Found as a member of the Girls' Athletic Association carried out her duty checking coats at home basketball games. G.A.A. undertook the unusual fund raising project to expand their program. They used the extra money to schedule two popular Parent-Daughter nights rather than the one of past years. Due to the shortage of hangers at the Wakefield game, the girls had to satisfy themselves with a record 123 coats.

Club members camped out twice during the year, at Prince William Forest in the Fall, Camp Letts in the Spring. Participation with other schools during play days rounded out the varied program.

"Practice makes perfect!" Diane Niland consoles herself with the comforting adage after losing the match.

"Where did it go?" wonders Diane Drain as she vainly searches for the ball that she just hit with her club.

INTRAMURALS

Coaches Divide Events Reorganize Class Sports

Intramural sports direction took on a different look this year as three coaches instead of one organized the teams, dividing the various activities among themselves. Mr. Sal DeGiorgi directed Fall athletics; Mr. Del Norwood, Winter; Mr. John Youngblood finished the year with Spring contests.

During the varsity activity, the season for the after school program began. The tournaments decided class and school champions with trophies going to participants of winning teams.

The activities program featured an open house which provided the opportunity for all students to use the gym equipment for an afternoon.

Racing for the ball, sophomore Gene Adkins dashes towards Mark Whikehart to tag him out in a "touch" football game.

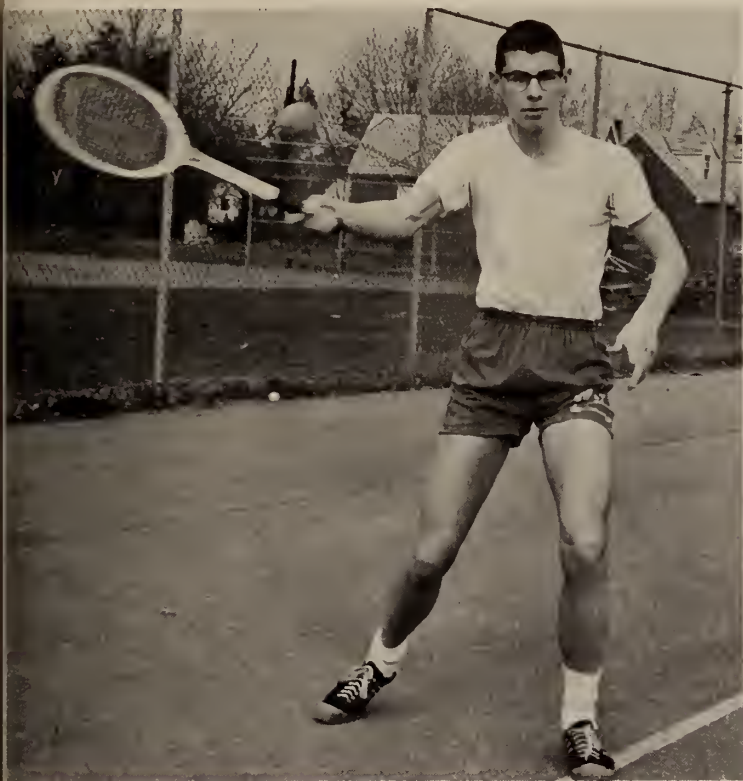

Taking careful aim, junior James Bobbit readies himself for the impact of the baseball while catcher junior James Shaw awaits the outcome of the swing—preparing himself for what may come; whether strike or pop up.

Confronted with the ball, senior Bob Kiefaber positions himself for returning the oncoming ball.

Shooting for a basket, David Gustafson outwits the other players at a sophomores intramural basketball game.

With a spike in mind, juniors Walter Johnson, John Leypoldt, and Steve White jump simultaneously during intramural game.

Days of Accomplishment

Lectures, research completed tests passed—all fill these days and give a feeling of accomplishment.

Looking up from his magazine, Col. Carl Brose, sophomore class sponsor, offers some helpful suggestions.

SOPHOMORE CLASS

"Big Brothers" Describe W-L Life to Sophomores

"Big Brother" visited W-L this year as senior class officers introduced an extension of sophomore orientation proceedings. Each month upperclass homeroom presidents consulted with their assigned tenth graders and helped them to adjust to Washington-Lee. Giving the sophomores an opportunity to make friends with one another and with the other members of the student body, an after-school mixer, sponsored by the juniors, further aided the orientation program. The Student Council contributed to the plan by supplying a copy of the revised student handbook to each tenth grader.

Selling candy, building a Thanksgiving float, and selecting an Easter Assembly speaker constituted other sophomore activities for the year.

JUNIOR CLASS

Class of '65 Promotes Cafeteria Clean-Up

"Keep your cafeteria clean," posters in every corner of the lunchroom implored, as juniors tried to alleviate mealtime congestion. Signs of various colors, adorned with miniature ragmops, encouraged students to replace chairs and keep order.

In April the class voted on the selection of candidates for Boys' and Girls' State. The representatives attended the summer program of student government at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and Radford College. The next few weeks held more decisions for the future seniors as they chose the coming year's class officers. Culminating the nine months of activities, juniors assisted at graduation exercises by serving as ushers.

SENIOR CLASS

Upperclassmen Remedy Sophomores' Confusion

In the past, a strange malady, sophomore confusion, struck incoming students; but this year, Colonel Carl Brose, the sponsor of the sophomore class, suggested a cure. The presidents of senior homerooms visited corresponding tenth grade sections to help orient the newcomers.

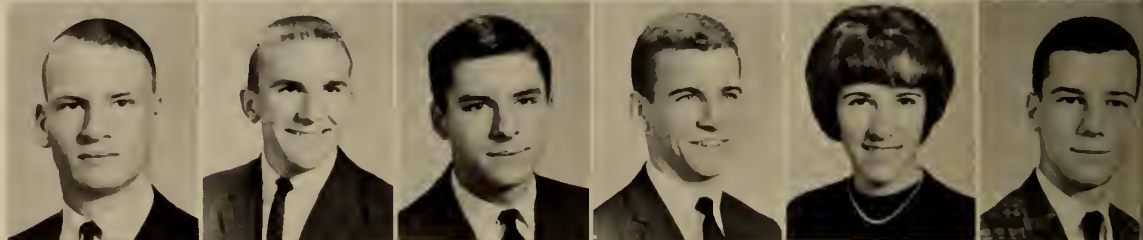

On the morning of the Yorktown football game, the upperclassmen instructed the sophomores in the proper ways to demonstrate school spirit. During class and homeroom elections, they discussed the characteristics of a responsible officer, and on other occasions, the groups considered suggested improvements for the cafeteria problems.

Pausing amid his many activities, senior class president, Gregg Hansen reviews the program for the Thanksgiving assembly.

J. W. Ayers

5853 Washington Boulevard

Arlington, Virginia

KE 8-5678

Ginny Croft and Bob Prater agree that spring and summer call for gardening, which they had previously thought of as a chore. Bob and Ginny happily learned that J. W. Ayers in Westover has the secret that makes gardening a breeze—reliable tools and supplies. No one who has fretted about grass seed that will not grow or weed killer that kills only grass ever feels inclined to garden again. You'll never have this problem with merchandise from Ayers. This dependability goes for everything sold at Ayers, including school supplies, toys, cosmetics, candy and household goods. Rely on Ayers for your every daily need.

Cherrydale Drugstore

4506 Lee Highway
Arlington, Virginia
JA 7-3090

Although Jill Marvel and Pete Bradshaw make their selection from only two items, the Cherrydale Drug Store has a wide variety of men's toiletries as well as women's cosmetics and perfumes from which to choose. Friendly, reliable service and an excellent pharmaceutical department are only a few reasons why you should always let Cherrydale be the place to go.

Castelberg's

3018 Wilson Boulevard
Arlington, Virginia
JA 8-0557

When Greg Hansen decided that he needed a watch, he asked Sharon Georgie to help him pick one out. Sharon immediately suggested that they go to Castelberg's Jewelers. The fine quality of both merchandise and service has made Castelberg's a name on which you can always depend. Besides jewelry, Castelberg's also carries silverware, clocks, stereos, and typewriters.

Casual Corner

4224 Wilson Boulevard
Arlington, Virginia
528-2280

As Karen Berndston and Susie Short admire a belt at Casual Corner, they wonder how one store can have such a varied and unusual selection of casual apparel. Girls who realize the importance of carefully choosing their clothing find Casual Corner more than capable of fulfilling their fashion needs. So whether you want school clothes or sportswear, visit Casual Corner.

Cardwell's, Inc.

640 North Glebe Road
Arlington, Virginia
